Swine flu—return of deadly 1918 virus?

(Second of a three-part series)

by CHARLES S. TAYLOR

ATLANTA (UPI) — The name of Camp Funston has faded from the pages of history, all but forgotten as the U.S. springboard in March 1918 for the greatest plague of modern times — the Spanish flu epidemic that killed 548,452 Americans in a few fearful weeks.

The death toll across the world was 21 million. India put its toll at 12.5 million, the highest of any nation. The Dutch East Indies was second with 800,000 and the United States was third. The continent of North America suffered a mortality of 1,075,685.

New York City counted 852 deaths in a single day. Chicago did not have enough hearses, and bodies stacked up in the morgues.

Pennsylvania was the hardest-hit state, with more than one-third of a million influenza cases and 10,000 deaths in less than two weeks.

TODAY, IN WHAT could be one of history's starkest ironies, another Army installation, Ft. Dix, N.J., may have become the site for the reappearance of that killer flu after an absence of 58 years.

In February, a swine-like virus was isolated during an outbreak of influenza among Army recruits at Ft. Dix. Medical scientists said it was similar to influenza viruses of the 1920s and 1930s. Blood tests of persons living in 1918 showed almost all have antibodies to the swine-like virus, indicating a possible link between the two strains.

Since the Ft. Dix outbreak, an event that set off alarm bells in health agencies across the world, there have been no more confirmed cases of human-to-human transmission of the illness.

how serious is it?

AT CAMP FUNSTON, Ft. Riley, Kan., in March, 1918, there also were no further outbreaks that spring and summer. But when autumn came, the Spanish flu returned as a killer. It ravaged World War I Army camps, cities and hamlets all over the nation.

In the weeks of October, a month before Armistice Day, it killed hundreds of thousands. The mysterious killer — infinitely more deadly than any of the weapons of war — felled its millions and disappeared. Where it went, no one knows, although there are theories now that the virus found sanctuary in swine, biding its time to strike again.

The Spanish flu, so named because it was believed to have originated in Spain and then imported into this country by a Coast Guard cutter returning from convoy duty, spread incredibly fast and over vast distances. Remote Eskimo villages were wiped out to the last person.

A BRITISH ARMY officer who traveled through northern Persia (Iran) in 1919 brought back word that in village after village there were no survivors. The U.S. death toll was 10 times the 53,513 American lives lost in battle in World War I.

The flu began with a high fever and aching bones. Many victims, after about four days, developed pneumonia. The lungs of the sick would fill with fluid, causing death. A peculiarity of the malady was that it appeared to strike young adults more harshly than older persons.

Mrs. Manget Davis, 73, of Dunwoody, Ga., a retired school principal, remembers that October "as a terrible time. Everyone around me was sick. There were five children, my father, mother and my aunt. All of us were sick except my father.

"There was no one to care for us. My father bought some cases of soup and fed us. That was all he could fix to eat.

"I REMEMBER THE newspaper headlines about flu sweeping the country. After that, I had a lot of trouble with my heart and it took me a long time to get over it."

Mrs. Davis said her husband at that time lived in Cave Spring, Ga., and "so many people died they ran out of coffins, or caskets. Some of the men got together and made pine boxes to bury the people in."

Mrs. L. A. Richardson of Atlanta, a teen-age bride at the time, contracted the flu and was ill for a long time, but survived. The family lived in Jefferson, Ga., and her brother, E. M

FBI links escapee to 2 kidnapings

by JOHN MAES

An escapee from a prison work release center has emerged as a prime suspect in the kidnapings of a Glencoe woman and a Sherman Oaks, Calif., businesswoman whose blood-stained auto was found April 12 in Rolling Meadows. The man has been convicted of several Northwest suburban robberies.

Chicago agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation late Wednesday said local and federal warrants have been issued for the arrest of Robert Edward Williams Jr., 23. An FBI spokesman said Williams' parents live in Elk Grove Village.

The warrants charge Williams with the aggravated kidnaping of Muriel Fulton of north suburban Glencoe last Thursday. The woman was released unharmed in Chicago, but only after paying her abductor a $6,000 cash ransom.

THE FBI ALSO said it is charging Williams in a federal warrant with kidnaping Evelyn Axlerod of Sherman Oaks, Calif. The woman was reported missing there April 8, but her abandoned auto was recovered by Rolling Meadows police four days later along New Wilke Road, just north of Golf Road.

The FBI said the warrants stem from fingerprints lifted from the auto used to abduct Mrs. Fulton from her Demonstrations moved from Arlington Heights to Chicago Wednesday as a Chicago neighborhood organization continued its protest against a proposed increase for residential rates for natural gas.

Protest staged at suburb home of utility chief

The protesters, members of the Northwest Community Organization, demanded to see George L. Murrow, president of Peoples Gas, Light and Coke Co., in his Chicago offices Wednesday after Arlington Heights police dispersed them from his village home Tuesday night.

The 75 demonstrators arrived by bus at Morrow's home about 9 p.m. Tuesday, according to police reports, and began passing out leaflets protesting the gas company's rate increase request now before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

THE LEAFLETS, listing Morrow's address and home telephone number, were addressed to Morrow's neighbors and urged them to call the company official at home as a show of support for the protest.

The leaflet said the residents of the Humboldt Park neighborhood of Chicago, are in some cases, now paying gas bills equal to their monthly rents.

Three Arlington Heights policemen, answering a complaint from a neighbor, ordered the protestors to leave. Police said they were violating state statutes and village ordinances prohibiting picketing of a private home.

The bus carrying the demonstrators was stopped as it was leaving town with a police escort. The protestors reportedly were throwing the leaflets out the bus windows.

PETER EARL, an organization spokesman, said the organization picketed the Morrow home because he has shown "a complete and total lack of concern and understanding" of their grievances.

Earl said some residents of the Humboldt Park area are now paying gas bills of $80 to $90 per month. He said residents must rely on gas space heaters to warm their apartments.

"These are poor people from a poor neighborhood," he said, and that they are faced with the choice of buying food or paying their gas bills.

Earl said efforts to meet directly with Morrow have been unsuccessful and the company has used "public relations people to smooth things over."

HE SAID PROTESTS, possibly including future picketing at Morrow's home will continue. The action at the company offices, 122 S. Michigan Ave., was part of the continuing campaign.

"There will be no rest until we get satisfaction," he said.

The treatment of the protesters by the police was termed "very rude, gross and totally impolite," by Earl.

Capt. Maurice English said no complaints about the conduct of the three policemen involved with the demonstration have been made formally.

English said if the organization returns to the village it could face possible arrest for picketing in a residential neighborhood.

"WE WILL MAINTAIN the peace of the neighborhood," he said, adding that if any arrests are made, they will take place on "advice of our (legal) counsel."

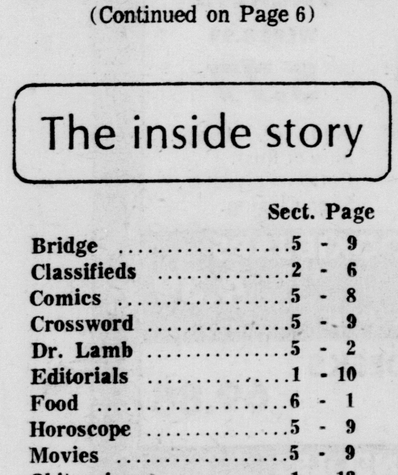
Ed Koska, a spokesman for Peoples Gas, said the company and Northwest Community Organization have "some long-standing grievances, the focal issue of which is high gas bills."

Koska said the proposed residential rate hike, of 8 to 11 per cent, is a direct result of "the energy crisis and a shortage of natural gas. As far as the gas bills go, well that's the way the game is."

However, he said the allegations of $80 and 90 monthly gas bills probably are inaccurate.

"CERTAINLY WE can sympathize with their complaints" about the gas bills, but increased costs makes the rate hike necessary, he said.

"Natural gas is still, by far, the biggest bargain," he said.



Conservationists recall Earth Day; What about you?

Today

Remember Earth Day: How about Earth Week?

In the good old days of three or four years ago, people who wanted to make the environment more livable took to the streets in enthusiastic rallies and marches. The gala event generally included trash cleanups, car washes and essay writing contests.

Earth Day has changed. In fact, some suburban environmentalists forgot all about today's (April 22) observance.

"We just forgot about it," said Hank Geibel of the Des Plaines Valley Chapter of the Sierra Club. Geibel is among several local environmental group leaders who look to citizen action programs rather than mass rallies as they way to a cleaner environment. The campaign to save the Middle Fork of the Vermillion River in Illinois from dam-building plans is one of the group's current projects.

"EARTH DAY is not a time to hold flashy meetings covered by the media," said Kay Quigg, president of the Palatine-based Pollud tion and Environmental Problems organizaton. Environmentalists have sobered up to the fact that there's a lot of work to be done and our time is better spent doing it than talking about it," she said.

The Pollution and Environmental Problems members are making plans to "save the earth's resources through energy conservation," Mrs. Quigg said. A task force on energy efficiency and conservation was created at the Pollution and Environmental Problems meeting Wednesday night. The group will work for passage of the Energy Conservation Act of 1976 and other conservation programs. Mrs. Quigg noted the Monday report by the Energy Research and Development Administration stresses U.S. energy conservation.

The Chicago Lung Assn. plans Earth Week exhibits through Friday at the Western Electric plant in Cicero. A press conference is slated today concerning clean air regulations.

Suspect hunted in Glencoe kidnap

Arrest warrants have been issued for a 23-year-old man suspected of kidnaping a Glencoe woman last week and abducting a Sherman Oaks, Calif., woman whose blood-stained auto was found in Rolling Meadows earlier this month. Chicago Federal Bureau of Investigation agents said late Wednesday authorities are seeking Robert Edward Williams Jr. for the abduction of Muriel Fulton from her home in north suburban Glencoe. Williams also is suspected of kidnaping Evelyn Axlerod, who was reported missing from her home in Sherman Oaks, Calif., April 8. Her auto was recovered April 12 by Rolling Meadows police. Williams' parents live in Elk Grove Village, an FBI spokesman said.

Drowning victim's body recovered

The body of an Arlington Heights youth was recovered from Devil's Lake in Wisconsin Wednesday, where he had drowned in a canoeing accident Monday. The body of John P. Furlong, 18, of 1003 N. Ridge Ave., was recovered by divers at noon Wednesday in 12 feet of water. Furlong, a senior at Arlington High School, was canoeing with two friends when the boat capsized. Furlong's two companions swam to shore about 100 yards away.

Police break up demonstration

A Chicago community organization moved its protest against proposed gas rate hikes to Chicago Wednesday after about 70 members of the group Tuesday night demonstrated in front of the Arlington Heights home of the president of Peoples Gas, Light and Coke Co. The protesters, members of the Northwest Community Organization, marched and passed out leaflets at the home of George L. Morrow, who was out of town at the time of the demonstration. The protesters arrived by bus but were escorted out of the village by Arlington Heights police after Morrow's neighbors complained. Wednesday, the group picketed in front of the utility company's Chicago headquarters before being dispersed by police.

Behrel backs O'Hare noise cuts

Des Plaines Mayor Herbert H. Behrel said he supports proposals by U. S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, to curb noise levels at O'Hare Airport. "I hope he (Mikva) can make his idea stick," Behrel said. Behrel said the city has been trying to get aircraft noise levels reduced at the Chicago airport "since 1969 with little success." Mikva has proposed reducing the number of flights by older model jets 20 per cent for each of the next five years. He said current federal aircraft noise standards apply only to jets built after 1974.

'Can-vention' at Arlington Hilton

More than 100,000 beer cans will be on display Sunday at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel, Arlington Heights, as the International Society of Beer Can collectors stage what officials say is the world's largest beer can convention. The public is invited to attend the convention between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children.

New instant Kodak now on market

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eastman Kodak Co. announced Tuesday it will market instant cameras and instant color film for the first time in its history in a bid for the lucrative market now held almost exclusively by Polaroid Corp.

Walter A. Fallon, president of the company which fathered the family snapshot almost a century ago, announced plans for immediate marketing of two models, one called the Ek4 to sell at $53.50 and an EK6 for $69.50. A folding model, to be known as Kodak EK8 — designed and produced by Kodak A.G. in Stuttgart, West Germany — will be marketed later this year.

Fallon said he was optimistic about the sales prospects for the instant cameras, anticipating "a strong demand." He would not speculate on what inroads the new Kodak products would make on Polaroid, which in 1975 had a sales volume of $813 million, 96 per cent of it in instant cameras and film.

"We think we have superb camera," Fallon said. "We think our shareholders will be happy with our efforts and our sales will make a contribution to our earnings."

Burden of inflation lifts

Increase in cost of living smallest in nearly 4 years

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The burden of inflation lifted slightly from American consumers during the first three months of 1976, when the cost of living showed its smallest quarterly increase in nearly four years, the Labor Department said Wednesday.

Consumer prices rose 0.2 per cent in March, capping an annual increase rate of 2.9 per cent since the start of 1976. Not since June, 1972, has the quarterly rise been so small.

This improvement over annual increases of 7 per cent in 1975 and 12.2 per cent in 1974 was much more pronounced than the administration had expected.

President Ford's top economic adviser, William Seidman, said in an interview a continuation of this trend might cause the administration to scale down its projection of 6 per cent inflation by the end of 1976.

But Seidman and other government economists cautioned the inflation rate undoubtedly will exceed the January-March level later in the year.

Presidential press secretary Ron Nessen said, "I want to raise the same caution that has been expressed in the White House before — that no one here believes it will be possible to maintain this low a level" every month. However, he added, "the President views this as excellent news. He welcomes it and sees it as further evidence that his economic policies are working."

"We should not get euphoric," warned Herman Liebling, chief Treasury economist.

Liebling noted, discounting food, consumer prices have risen about 5 per cent since the start of 1976 and recent and drastic declines in food prices are not expected to continue.

"That is closer to the base rate of inflation," he said.

Despite the slack in inflation, a drop in average weekly earnings in March caused real spendable income to decline 0.7 per cent following increases in the previous two months.

Following increases of 0.1 per cent in February and 0.4 per cent in January, consumer prices in March were 6.1 per cent over a year ago.

The Consumer Price Index stood at 167.5 — meaning that goods and services costing $100 in 1967, now cost $167.50.

Food prices fell 0.8 per cent in March and there was a substantial 1.7 per cent drop in gasoline prices. These declines helped blunt the effects of an 0.7 per cent rise in service costs and a 0.3 per cent increase in other commodities — including a 3.8 per cent jump in used car prices.

Beef prices fell 4.7 per cent, accompanied by declines in the price of eggs, pork, poultry, fresh vegetables, dairy products, cereal and bakery products, sugar, fats and oils and processed fruits and vegetables.

Prices continued to climb for transportation, medical care and household services. The 1.3 per cent increase in transportation reflected higher auto insurance rates and public transit fees. The rise in household service costs was attributed primarily to large increases for natural gas and electricity.

A WORKER IN DETROIT installs a door panel, one of 15,000 separate parts that went into making the last of the U.S. convertibles. This last model, a Cadillac Eldorado, was assembled in Cadillac's home plant Wednesday and will go on permanent exhibition at Cadillac headquarters. . . Cadillac's way of dealing with all the requests for the last soft top. From a peak popularity of more than 509,000 rag tops in 1965, the convertible has declined in popularity. Cadillac built exactly 14,000 convertibles for the 1976-model year before bringing the era to an end.

Highest court rules on 'taxpayer rights'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that neither rights to privacy nor against self-incrimination are violated when the Internal Revenue Service obtains a taxpayer's records from his bank or his accountant's records from the taxpayer himself.

In a third major ruling, the justices held that a taxpayer is not constitutionally entitled to warnings about his right to remain silent when questioned by tax agents at his home or office.

With two justices dissenting, the court ruled that when a taxpayer uses bank facilities he has no "legitimate expectation of privacy."

Therefore, the opinon said, when the IRS — and presumably other law enforcement agencies — subpoena banks for the microfilmed records of a depositor, the strict search warrant requirements of the Fourth Amendment are not necessary.

"The depositor takes the risk, in revealing his affairs to another, that the information will be conveyed by that person to the government," wrote Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. William J. Brennan and Thurgood Marshall dissented.

Under the 1970 Bank Secrecy Act, every bank must keep microfilmed records of customer transactions which, under Wednesday's ruling, will be freely available to law officers who obtain a subpoena.

In the accounting records case, Justice Byron R. White wrote a major 22-page treatise on the status of the Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination.

All eight participating justices agreed that a taxpayer's rights are not violated when he is compelled to turn over records compiled by his accountant.

Since only the accountant can vouch for the authenticity of the records, the defendant taxpayer is not testifying against himself. He can, for example, deny that the records are accurate.

White's ruling was broader, saying any criminal defendant can be required to turn over documents which, although potentially incriminating, were not written by the defendant himself.

Although concurring as to the narrow tax record question, Brennan expressed fear the court was laying groundwork for a future ruling allowing law officers access to all documentary evidence in a defendant's possession, including his private diaries, letters and other papers.

In the third tax case, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger said so-called Miranda warnings are not required when tax agents talk with a potential defendant in his home or office.

Although the taxpayer may have been the "focus" of an investigation, Burger said, "he hardly found himself in the custodial situation" covered by the Miranda rule, such as police interrogation.

In a fourth ruling Wednesday, the justices held that the Freedom of Information Act requires the Air Force Academy to produce for court inspection edited summaries of hearings held under the academy's honor code.

Long Rubber Worker strike could close auto plants

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The United Rubber Workers Wednesday struck the nation's major tire producers, and an auto company spokesman said the work stoppage would "shut down every auto plant in the country" if it lasts for a month.

URW President Pete Bommarito said he expected the strike against Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., Goodyear Tire and Rubber Corp., B. F. Goodrich and Uniroyal to "last for some time."

The URW struck the rubber companes when its contract expired at midnight Tuesday.

The three major auto producers, General Motors Corp., Ford and Chrysler, all issued statements Wednesday in Detroit in which they said the strike would have no immediate impact on auto production.

General Motors and Chrysler both estimated they could last a month but Ford said it could operate only for "several weeks."

"There is no question the strike would shut down every auto plant in the country if it lasts as long as a month and sooner if we should start running short of individual parts," a GM spokesman said.

In Illinois more than 2,650 members of the union, including 1,800 workers in Decatur, walked off the job at four plants.

The walkout in Decatur halted production at one of Firestone's larger plants, Larry Harper vice president of the URW Local 713, said. He said the plant turns out about 27,000 tires a day.

Another 240 rubber workers were off the job at Firestone's plant in Bloomington.

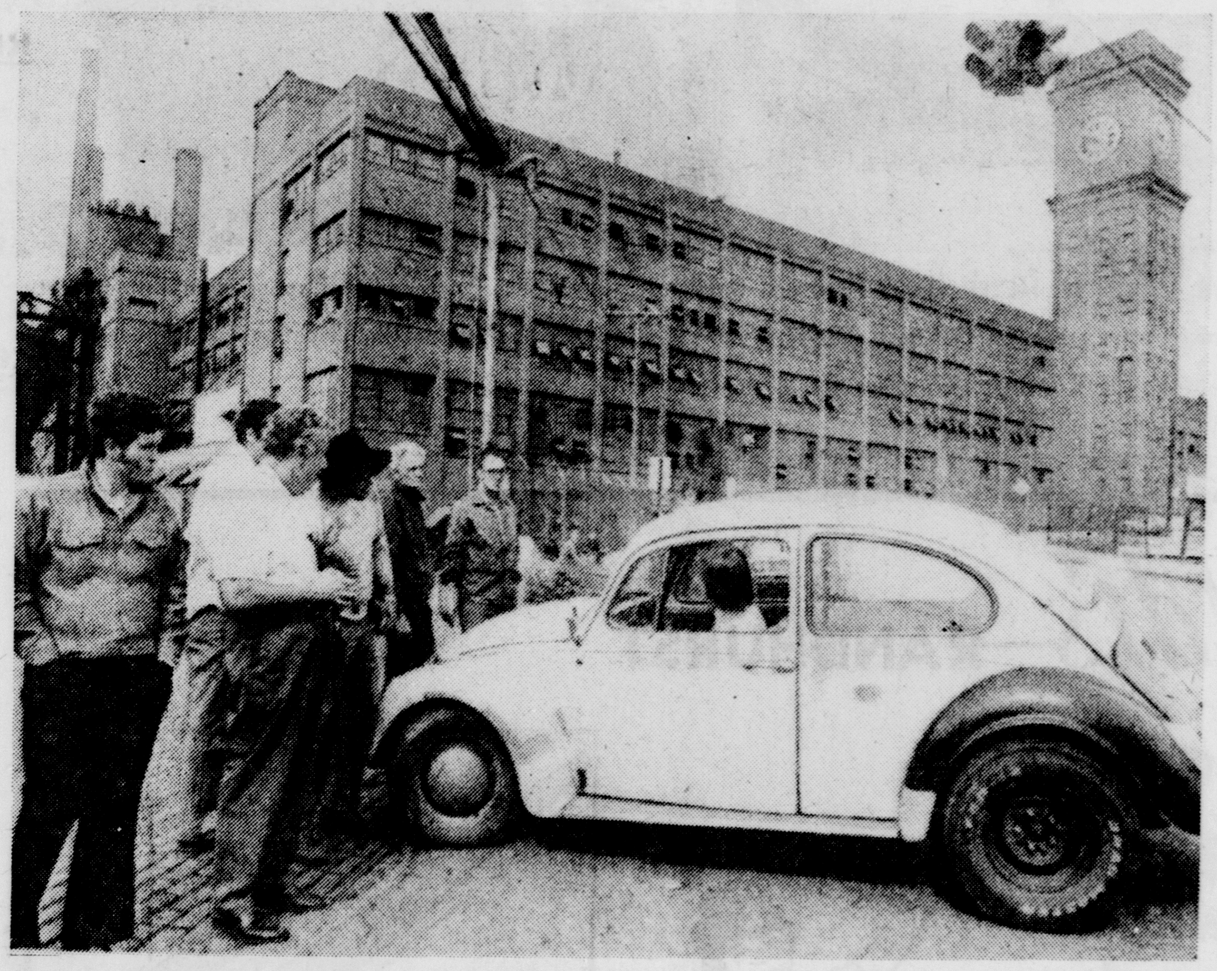
Some 470 members of URW Local 532 did not report for work at the Goodyear Tire's North Chicago hose plant, which manufactures hose for the automobile industry, air conditioning hose and industrial hose.

Uniroyal's Chicago manufacturing plant was crippled by a walkout of about 150 members.

B. F. Goodrich does not have any tire dealers indicated the strike would the state.

A check of several Chicago area trie dealers indicated the strike would have no immediate effect on local tire supplies.

A spokesman for the Chicago Association of Commerce and Industry said the impact of the strike on the Chicago area would be slight for at least the first 90 days.



STRIKING MEMBERS of the United Rubber Workers turn away driver attempting to cross picket line at Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. plant in Akron, Ohio. The strike idled more than 60,000 workers.

Chance of 2nd oil embargo disturbs Zarb

From Herald News Services

The United States stands a "disturbingly great chance" of another oil embargo — worse than the one two years ago, Federal Energy Administration head Frank Zarb said Wednesday in Chicago.

Zarb, in remarks at the American Power Conference, said the nation has been living on "borrowed time much too long, and if the countries which sell us petroleum products decide to stop the clock again, we'll be in for a crash refresher course in what life was like during the last embargo."

This time, Zarb said, it won't mean just long gasoline lines. In some places, it will mean no gasoline or lights at all.

"The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has the oil we need, and they can be expected to make the most of the sellers' market they enjoy," Zarb said.

The problem could be averted, he said, if the U.S. embarked on a plan including conservation of all energy resources, maximum domestic oil and gas production, doubling domestic coal productin and harnessing nuclear power.

Judge OKs mailing of Teamster ballots

A federal judge Wednesday dismissed a dissidents' suit charging the Teamsters union with tryingto conduct an illegal contract ratification vote. The ruling by U.S. District Judge William B. Bryant allowed the union to mail ratification ballots to some 450,000 members to vote on a new three-year master freight agreement reached with the trucking industry earlier this month after a three-day nation-wide walkout.

The union had been under a temporary restraining order since late last week prohibiting it from mailing the ballots. Union attorneys said the prepared ballots would have to be reprinted if Bryant delayed the mailing beyond Wednesday.

ITT chiefs ordered to court

Top officials of the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. have been ordered to appear in federal court for withholding documents on questionable foreign and domestic payments, the Securities and Exchange Commission disclosed Wednesday. The SEC is seeking ITT documents dating back to 1968, which would cover, among other things, the period when ITT is alleged to have cooperated with the CIA to intervene in Chilean politics.

Medics picket Los Angeles hospital

About 200 interns and resident physicians set up picket lines at the giant County-USC Medical Center in Los Angeles Wednesday. Two other county hospitals were also being struck but picket lines were not immediately established. The young doctors were seeking higher wages, shorter hours and an increase in a fund for emergency patients.

Princess Anne injured in fall from horse

Princess Anne, daughter of Queen Elizabeth and candidate for Britain's equestrian team at the Montreal Olympics, suffered a cracked vertebra Wednesday when her horse threw her and rolled on her at a country competition. Anne, 25, will remain overnight in Poole General Hospital where she was rushed for treatment after the accident at Durweston.

Taiwan train rams bus, at least 38 die

An express train rammed and demolished a bus crowded with school children on their way home Wednesday, killing and injuring scores of teen-agers in Taipei, Taiwan. At least 38 persons died and all 43 others on the bus were injured. Most of the victims were students aged 13 to 15. All of the surviving children were listed in "serious to critical condition." Many were not expected to live.

Palestinian troops man buffer zones

Palestinian Liberation Army troops manning buffer zones between warring Lebanese Christian and Moslem gunmen Wednesday had limited success in enforcing the cease-fire, supposedly in effect for the past 19 days. The PLA soldiers stopped the fighting in some areas of Beirut, but battles raged elsewhere in the city and in the country, killing at least 15 persons and wounding more than 30.

In Jerusalem, meantime, sporadic demonstrations against Jewish settlement in the occupied West Bank of Jordan flared again Wednesday between Israeli troops and mobs of rock-throwing Arabs. Club-swinging soldiers broke up small crowds of high school girls who set up barricades of rocks and burning tires.

Swine virus link feared

Deadly 1918 flu staging return?

McDonald, was a rural doctor.

"People out in the country really did suffer," she said. "Everybody in a family would be sick. My brother would go into a house and find them dead in bed.

"We didn't lose anybody in our family to the flu. But I had it and my husband and another brother had it. We went to my mother's house and she took care of us."

THERE WAS NEAR panic in some cities. In Chicago, police were ordered to make wholesale arrests, if necessary, "to stop sneezing in public." Congress closed all galleries, except for the press. Washington, D.C. passed a law forbidding persons to "expose" themselves to influenza.

In New York, sneezers were subject to fines and jail sentences. The city closed all its libraries. Many cities forbade barbers to shave their customers because of the close contact involved.

Some communities urged its citizens to wear fresh pajamas. Others suggested that the practice of shaking hands be abandoned. Boston had churchless Sundays. Schools, movie houses and saloons were padlocked.

Poems were written about the terrible epidemic, one of which went, "I had a little bird, its name was Enza. I opened a window and in-flu-enza."

THE NEAR-UNIVERSAL law ordering the wearing of face masks in public inspired another ditty — "Obey the laws and wear the gauze. Protect your jaws from septic paws."

The flow of Army draftees to camps was stopped because camp hospitals overflowed with flu patients. Industrial absenteeism ran high and the production of coal and steel was threatened.

With the coming of November, the killer virus began to wane. The number of cases dropped dramatically. Face masks were discarded and home remedies were put back into America's medicine chests.

The disappearance of the Spanish flu virus remains a medical mystery. In 1951 a medical team led by Dr. Albert P. McKee of the State University of Iowa journeyed to Alaska and exhumed the bodies of several flu victims buried in the frozen earth. Lung sections were packed in ice and sent to laboratories in an effort to infect animals. But the virus could not be recovered and all efforts to isolate it failed. Since the killer virus of 1918 was never identified, medical experts say it could strike again and take its toll and the world would not know it was being re-visited by the malady. But in contrast to that lethal October 58 years ago, science has given the world an effective vaccine to protect the population, and a powerful assortment of antibiotics to treat its complications.

Health chiefs first vaccine testers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With a ceremonial inoculation of top health officials, the government Wednesday began testing vaccine designed to head off a possible swine flu epidemic next fall.

Dr. Theodore Cooper, assistant secretary of the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare, injected the first vaccine sample into the left arm of Dr. Harry Meyer, of the Food and Drug Administration, who stood smiling before a room full of reporters and cameramen.

Cooper then took hoff his gray suit jacket, rolled up his left shirt sleeve and received the second inoculation from a doctor on the staff of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

Altogether, more than 200 government volunteers were given the test vaccine. It was the start of trials involving 3,000 men, women and children across the nation to determine the most effective minimum dose to immunize 200 million Americans against the new flu virus strain.

BESIDES DETERMINING the proper dose level, the tests will show any adverse reactions from the vaccine. Dr. Alexander Schmidt, head of the FDA, said about one of every four or five people receiving shots might get a sore arm. He estimated one in 100 might develop a fever.

The vaccine is made from killed virus and thus there is no chance anyone could get the flu from the inoculations.

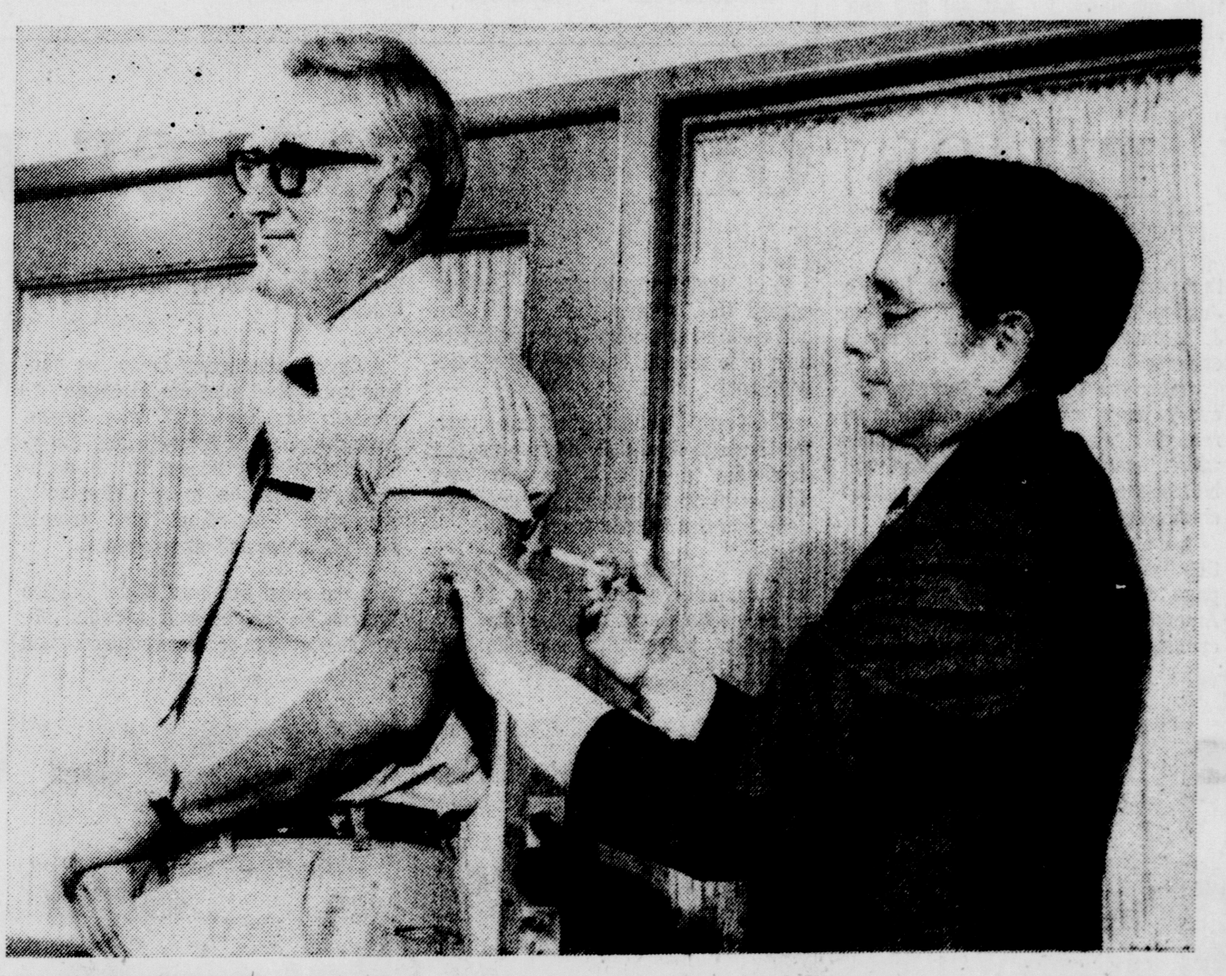
Cooper then took off his gray suit be in by early June and then the four drug companies making the vaccine will move into full-scale production.

"We hope to begin making vaccine available to high-risk groups this summer, around mid to late August, and then continue immunization programs for the rest of the population through the fall," Cooper said. "We hope t complete it by Christmas."

THIS IS THE first time the nation has attempted to immunize virtually everyone against an anticipated flu epidemic.

The concern with the new virus, first isolated in February at Ft. Dix, N.J., is not that it is more severe than other types of influenza ,but that it represents a considerable change from the strains of flu viruses of the past few decades.

This means most of the population has no immunity to the disease and thus it could spread very quickly and affect large numbers of people and cause thousands of deaths.



DR. HARRY M. MEYER of the Food and Drug Administration, receives first test shot of a new vaccine designed to ward off swine flu. Administering the shot is Dr. Theodore Cooper, assistant secretary of the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare.

Eliot Janeway addresses group

U.S. clout will stimulate economic gain: writer

by LEA TONKIN

Once the U.S. starts using clout in its oil and grain deals, the country's economic gains will snowball into a major construction and development boom.

That's the prediction of political economist Eliot Janeway. The syndicated newspaper columnist and author addressed 500 suburban business executives at a conference Wednesday at the Lancer Steak House, Schaumburg. The meeting was sponsored by the Bank of Elk Grove.

"I don't see any problems around that can't be reduced to false alarms," Janeway said. He cited consumer spending as a boost to current economic gains. Problems stem from dealings with foreign countries, the economist said.

JANEWAY BELIEVES the Ford Administration and the American public are too easily buffaloed by talk of another oil shortage.

The "red herring" rumors of another embargo briefly affected stock market trading Wednesday, although the market closed at record high levels, he said. "How can there be another oil embargo if there never was one to begin with?" he asked.

The previous Mideast oil embargo was a hoax, Janeway said. While Sec. of State Henry Kissinger is telling everyone to go along with $11 a barrel oil prices, the U.S. should be trying to strike a better bargain, he said. "The problem is that we'll pay any price to be consistent."

The Mideast oil cartel "can't give their stuff away — so they raise the price," Janeway said. He estimated the U.S. imports 5 to 6 per cent of its oil supply from Mideast countries. "Our big source is Venezuela. Any time we can't handle Venezuela, we're fresh out of a government," he said.

Janeway also called for hard bargainings in the export of U.S. grain.

"THE U. S. ECONOMY runs on wasteful oil consumption," he said. Janeway said it's the use of gas-guzzling machines that contribute to the national income development in the Northwest suburbs and elsewhere.

"If you had oil conservation, this entire country would be on food stamps," he said.

"The biggest, safest boom in history" could be marred by devaluation of Japanese currency Janeway said. The public should look to Japan for an indicator of future U.S. economic trends. Devaluation in Japan could scrap the recovery, he said.

Discussing Japan's willingness to take on added debt, Janeway said the definition of bankruptcy is when you can't borrow the money to pay interest.

Janeway turned to political comment. "Ford's got a real problem. It's so pointed, so real that even he can see it," Janeway said. The problem is that the President "needs to get rid of Kissinger."

JANEWAY SAID John Connally may join Ford as his runningmate for the coming primary elections, in a deal worked out this week.

The Southern vote will be the pacemaker for Republican and Democratic slates, the columnist said. He predicts Jimmy Carter may gain favor as the favorite son of the South and a "hawk."

Downtown area exempt from land dedication law

The central business district has been exempted from an Arlington Heights land dedication ordinance except in cases of residential developments.

The village's plan commission last month recommended the ordinance, which requires developers to donate land or money in lieu of land to the park and school districts, be amended to exclude the central business district because of the village's efforts to encourage development in the downtown area.

In a compromise suggested by trustee Frank Palmatier, the board agreed to exempt the central business district, except when developed for residential use, and attached an amendment allowing developers to make the payments in lieu of land in five yearly installments.

DURING DISCUSSION over exempting the central business district, Trustees Madeline Schroeder and August Bettman became involved in a debate.

Mrs. Schroeder said that residential development of the downtown area without land being donated to the park and school districts could cause crowding in present facilities and possible decreased property values.

"Since we all benefit from open space recreational facilities, I think we should all participate in their development," she said.

BETTMAN, who is chairman of the special downtown improvements committee, called Mrs. Schroeder's statements "hypothetical" and "unrealistic."

"I don't think you can really believe the development of downtown is really going to decrease property values, but I promise you that property values will increase if we don't do something to get new development in our downtown," Bettman said.

Bettman unsuccessfully urged the board to provide "incentive and encouragement" to downtown developers by excluding the central business district from the ordinance.

Trustee Richard Durava disagreed, saying, "We don't owe the CBD (Central Business District) anything. They are landowners, just as the rest of us are. I don't think they should have any special incentives."

Boating equipment worth $1,800 stolen

Thieves stole boating equipment valued at $1,800 from Smith Marine, 1730 W. Algonquin Rd., Arlington Heights, police reported Wednesday.

Thieves took an outboard motor, engine accessories, waterskis and four life jackets from a dry-docked boat owned by Robert Ecker of Cicero, police said. The manager of Smith Marine reported the theft Wednesday morning.

The bandits gained entry by unbolting a 10-foot chain-link fence and removed items from the boat by dismantling and unbolting them, police said.

Expert studies Catholic schools

Should church leave education?

From Herald news services

The time may have come for the Catholic Hierarchy to get out of the education business, says a sociologist who blames the decline of Catholic schools on poor leadership and a loss of faith in the schools' work.

Prof. William McCready, codirector of a recent National Opinion Research Center study on the impact of Catholic education, presented the results of the study this week during the annual meeting of the National Catholic Educational Assn. in Chicago. McCready is associate director of the research center at the University of Chicago.

Chicago Archdiocese School Supt. Rev. Robert H. Clark, who is attending the meeting, said Thursday he agrees with several of McCready's remarks.

"PERHAPS THE hierarchy ought to get out of the educational enterprise altogether and turn it completely over to those who are more committed to it," McCready said.

Father Clark said Thursday he would like to see more involvement in education at the local parish school level. "I have always been in favor of the establishment of school boards both at the diocese level and the parish level," he said. "Parents must be more directly involved in decisions related to the school" if Catholic education is to receive their support.

According to the McCready study, Catholic schools are supported strongly by a large majority of the nation's 50 million Catholics, but their support will plummet if the church hierarchy does not lift an apparent ban on the building of new Catholic schools.

The committment to Catholic education probably will decline significantly in the next 10 years unless the bishops cease their moratorium on building schools, McCready said. Catholics interviewed for the survey cited the unavailability of Catholic schools as the primary reason for not sending their children to them.

FATHER CLARK said he agrees that "the decline in enrollment is significantly related to the fact that there has been a moratorium on school construction for the past 10 or 11 years." He said there were valid reasons for the moratorium on construction, one being the decline in the numbers of religious men and women to staff Catholic schools.

That situation, which existed in 1965 and 1966, has now changed, he said. Today there are many more priests and nuns who are willing to take on the job of operating Catholic schools and more schools should be opened, he said.

According to the McCready study, in 1965 nearly 3.5 million students attended 14,296 Catholic schools in the United States, but by 1975 enrollment had dropped 35 per cent to 2.9 million and the number of schools dropped 24 per cent to 1,722.

McCready told Catholic educators there is more than enough money available to continue and even expand the parochial school system, indicating there could be as much as $1.8 billion of unused support money.

CONTRARY TO the arguments one usually hears from bishops and pastors, McCready said there is ample evidence that Catholic parents want more Catholic schools and are ready to pay for them.

"The schools are the ugly ducklings of the church. They do not have the majestic ritual of the liturgy, nor the satisfying crinkling and tinkling of a successful fund-raiser, McCready said, asking:

"Are they worth all the trouble? Are parochial schools worth the investment and upkeep, or should we just phase them out?"

FBI hunts escapee in two kidnapings home and from Mrs. Axlerod's car. The prints were found to be identical, the FBI said.

An FBI spokesman said Williams is about 155 pounds, with brown hair, green eyes and of slim build. He formerly served with the U. S. Navy in California.

An FBI spokesman said Williams is an escapee from a Joliet Prison work release center in Chicago where he was serving a sentence for conviction of several burglaries, some of which he committed in Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights. The FBI did not say when Williams escaped.

AUTHORITIES ALSO were investigating a "strong possibility" that Williams was responsible for the April 12 abduction of an Itasca woman from the Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg.

Also under investigation was a possible tie-in to a robbery and attempted robbery there the same day and the armed robbery of an Arlington Heights grocery store that occurred a day later.

Schaumburg authorities declined to comment on the case but said they also were still investigating a possible connection.

Dist. 214 wrapup

Committee to fight against unit district

A committee of three High School Dist. 214 Board of Education members has been formed to fight formation of a unit district in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59.

Dist. 214 Board Pres. Donald Hoeck appointed Gene Artemenko as chairman Monday night and John Costello and Marilyn Quinn as committee members.

A citizens' committee investigating the feasibility of a unit school system in Dist. 59 has come out in favor of a unit distridt by recommending that the Dist. 59 Board pursue the proposal of unifying elementary and high schools in the Dist. 59 area.

A unit school district would have one administration and board of education for both elementary and high schools. The unit plan now proposed would remove Elk Grove and Forest View high schools from Dist. 214 boundaries and add them to a unit district, along with Dist. 59's elementary schools.

Last January, the Dist. 214 Board unanimously opposed formation of a unit district, saying Dist. 214 stands to lose about $1.5 million in state aid per year if the unit district is formed. Administrators also have said they find no advantages for Dist. 214 if a unit district is formed. If a unit district is formed, Dist. 214 would lose about 40 per cent of its tax base, about 27 per cent of its students and about $6 million in assets.

"As a board member all I want to do is make sure everybody knows what the facts are," Artemenko said.

4% staff pay increase OKd

A 4 per cent pay raise for nonclassified staff in High School Dist. 214 for the 1976-77 school year was approved by the board.

The raise, along with other work-related items, was negotiated between members of the board and administration and the negotiating committee of the Educational Supportive Personnel Assn., representing secretaries, clerical help and instructional aides.

Employes are paid according to their job description, which is categorized in eight levels. They also receive raises annually in a series of 11 steps.

The raise, along with other work-related items, was negotiated between members of the board and administration and the negotiating committee of the Educational Supportive Personnel Assn., representing secretaries, clerical help and instructional aides.

Canoeist's body located by divers in Wisconsin

The body of an Arlington Heights man was recovered Wednesday from Devil's Lake, Wis., where he had drowned in a canoeing accident Monday.

The Sauk County Sheriff's police said the body of John P. Furlong, 18, of 1003 N. Ridge Ave., Arlington Heights, was recovered by divers about noon Wednesday in 12 feet of water.

Furlong, a senior at Arlington High School, was canoeing with two companions Monday when the boat tipped over.

AUTHORITIES SAID Furlong, reportedly unable to swim, floundered and sank about 100 yards from shore. The companions, whose names were not released, swam to safety.

The youths had been camping at Devil's Lake State Park near Baraboo during the Easter school vacation. Park officials said the park, about 200 miles from Chicago, is a popular gathering place for students near the Wisconsin-Illinois border.

The Sauk County Coroner examined the victim's body Wednesday, but no results were released. Authorities said an inquest into the youth's death may be held.

The search for Furlong began Monday afternoon and was continued Tuesday. It was suspended Tuesday afternoon when threatening weather hampered divers' efforts.

Divers from the Madison Police Dept. and the Dane County Sheriff's police assisted in the search.

Cooperation urged in bid for lake water pipeline

Three Northwest suburban communities which have contributed funds to a regional organization seeking water from Lake Michigan are urging financial cooperation between that group and another one also seeking lake water.

Charles Willis, chairman of SHARE +3, a regional water commission, said the executive council Monday will consider the funding cooperation request, which has been supported by officials from Arlington Heights, Palatine and Mount Prospect, all DAMP members. Des Plaines, an original member of DAMP, dropped out of the program. The city has lake water.

Members of SHARE + 3 are Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove Village, Buffalo Grove, Palatine and Mount Prospect.

THE ARLINGTON Heights and Palatine village boards hesitated recently before approving the $5,000 contribution required of SHARE + 3 communities by June 1 because of previous financial payments to DAMP.

Palatine trustees said the dues for SHARE — 3 should be pro-rated because there is a duplication of effort between the two commissions.

In approving the contribution, the Palatine Village Board asked for a detailed itemization on how the funds will be spent before turning over the $5,000 fee.

The SHARE + 3 fee was approved 4 to 2 Monday by the Arlington Heights Village Board.

Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan and Trustee Robert Miller asked the board to delay paying the $5,000 because the Village of Arlington Heights has already spent more than $25,000 through DAMP.

MILLER ARGUED that communities who have been contributing to DAMP should not have to pay the $5,000 fee to SHARE + 3.

"DAMP is the only organization that has spent a great amount of money for legal fees fighting the Metropolitan Sanitary District for a share of the allocation of Lake Michigan water, but everyone is going to benefit," Miller said.

"Since we've already paid our dues, so to speak, in those legal fees to DAMP, I think the $5,000 requirement from SHARE should be waived," he said.

Ryan cited a "certain amount of infighting" between the two water commissions. "Maybe our reticence at paying this could at least serve in having SHARE + 3 look into the all-area approach more," he said.

Miller and Ryan agreed that Arlington Heights should continue its membership in SHARE — 3, but along with Trustee Frank Palmatier, urged that the organization consider assisting DAMP with future legal and engineering costs.

MOUNT PROSPECT has agreed to pay the $5,000 fee to SHARE + 3, but supports the idea of SHARE + 3 assisting DAMP.

"We have already said, by the trustees voting to join SHARE, that we have to join together (with DAMP) financially or legally in the fight for lake water and for survival," David L. Creamer, Mount Prospect public works director, said.

DAMP will need between $10,000 and $20,000 to continue its battle with the MSD in state hearings and then, possibly, in the courts, DAMP chairman Robert Teepe said.

"We need a good rebuttal case with expert testimony of engineers," Teepe said.

DAMP IS attempting to convince state officials that the MSD, which uses almost half of the Lake Michigan water allocation allowed by the U. S. Supreme Court, is wasting the water, he said.

"We're trying to prove that they (MSD) can do things to conserve water in the flushing of sewage, but they say they don't have that much discretionary use," Teepe said.

"I think the others will agree that the burden of this shouldn't just be on the three communities in DAMP, but that it should be divided up equitably," he said.

Daley demands return of airlines to Midway

Mayor Richard J. Daley reiterated an earlier prediction Wednesday that Chicago will one day have a new airport on Lake Michigan with an underwater terminal.

But for the moment, he said, the important thing was to get major airlines to resume using financially-crippled Midway Airport. Just because the airlines will lose money is no excuse, the mayor said.

Midway has all but been abandoned by major airlines in favor of consolidated operations at O'Hare International Airport.

"They haven't got the right to say no," Daley told reporters after a ceremony honoring American Airlines for 50 years of service. "This is one city. If they make $35 million at O'Hare and lose $2 million at Midway, they still end up making $33 million in the city."

Asked about his previous plan to build an airport on Laek Michigan, Daley said that too was inevitable.

"Engineers all over the world say that in the future airports should be built over water," he said, to reduce noise pollution and avoid displacement of people.

"We'll do it . . . with a tunnel and the terminal under water and the runways above," he said.

State mulls study refund

The head of the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission said in Chicago Wednesday the ILEC plans to meet next week with a New York City consulting firm to determine if the state is entitled to a refund of nearly $350,000 spent on a crime evaluation study.

ILEC Director David Fogel said the Institute of Law and Social Progress would be asked to show all data compiled in the study and submit records of all money received and spent.

Fogel fired the institute members April 14 after 11 months of research into the effectiveness of crime fighting programs revealed the institute "had management difficulties."

Whether the state is entitled to a refund of money already spent on the $767,000 contract would be determined when the institute submits its financial records, Fogel said.

Among those expenses questioned are $8,700 a year to rent a suite in Chicago; $9,200 in expenses for staff; $241,000 in salaries and other expenses; $52,000 in computer expenses and $16,875 in consulting fees to a New York City police aide.

6 indicted in heroin case

Six persons accused of being members of a major North Side heroin ring which smuggled Mexican narcotics through Peoria were named Wednesday in previously-suppressed federal indictments.

Frank Pedote, 57, Morton, a Peoria suburb, was the only Downstate resident named in the indictments.

Others were Michael Demaro, 60; his wife, Audrey; Charles Dillela, 52; Joseph Lyle, 60, and Armando Piemonte, 61, all of Chicago.

Except for Piemonte, all were charged with conspiracy to sell narcotics. All but Pedota were charged with either possession or sale of narcotics or both.

The heroin was believed to have been shipped from Mexico to Peoria where it was picked up for distribution on the North Side.

Czajkowski, Reynolds offer hope in Dist. 54

The Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 board of education looks like it is on the way to recovering from the traumas of last year.

The board, in a 6-1 vote, last week elected Arlene Czajkowski board president and then elected Sherry Reynolds board secretary.

The relative harmony which attended the election of officers was a marked contrast to last year, when Dr. Edgar Feldman was elected president after every other board member either refused to run or failed to win a majority vote.

Mrs. Czajowski, who served on the board from 1972-75 before being defeated for reelection last year, comes to the board presidency with several significant qualifications.

She has experience on the board and has a reputation for being a hard-working, community-minded board member who promises to be responsive to the educational needs of the district.

At the same time, she was fortunate enough to miss out on the major crises, including the teacher's strike, which split the board last year.

For months, the Dist. 54 board has needed to find a way to overcome the bitter divisions that afflict it and to function as a unit in debating district problems.

The election of Mrs. Czajkowski to the board presidency offers real hope that the healing process on the Dist. 54 board finally will begin.

The election of Ms. Reynolds as board secretary, the officer who will take over the presidency when the president is absent, offers further hope.

Ms. Reynolds is the board member who threatened to sue one of her fellow board members for libel during the teacher's strike last year. The fact that such an outspoken member of the minority faction on the board is now part of the board leadership is a good sign.

If the election of Mrs. Czajkowski and Ms. Reynolds to positions of board leadership does signify an end to factionalism on the board, the final winner will be the public who will be dealing with a board that can see the district's problems without the distortion of personal animosity.

A more responsive look would be perfect for you.

Fence post: Former trustee: Board should accept its 'adulthood'

As a Mount Prospect trustee who voted in favor of the bond issue for the new village library, I have read, with some concern, the demands now being made upon the Village for funds beyond the usual appropriations provided under the village tax levy.

I approved the new library and still consider it an asset to the village. Nevertheless, I am disturbed by the fact that the architect as well as the library board members did not have their facts and figures accurate enough to consider all costs and village ordinances prior to the approval of the bond issue. And the board must have known prior to building the new library that additional books would be needed and have made provision for them while arranging for other economies if needed.

It is unconscionable that the village board should continue to be placed in the position of meeting the demands of the library board and having to take the brunt of public concern.

The time has come for Mr. Parson's board to accept its "adulthood" and plan and operate like any big business. The Village Board should not be placed in the position of "big brother" any longer.

It is time for the Library to become a district of its own with taxing ability. It is also time that the library board itself, take the responsibility for asking for a referendum for any additional moneys it feels it needs to run an adequate library in the new home for which Village Board approval was given.

Ira Berkow's 'In Focus'

A school not about to conform

by Ira Berkow

By 1966, Joe Gauld was saying, he couldn't look his students in the eyes anymore. He was teaching in a high school in New Hampshire and believing that the system was failing his students, and that he was part of that system.

The "best" students were systemized. If you conform, if you are unquestioning of the teachers, you'll pass the courses, get into the better colleges and slip peacefully and quietly through life.

"I felt that there had to be a better way, a way to develop character, courage, integrity, concern for others, curiosity and leadership," said Gauld.

Gauld decided to try to establish his own school, based on those principles. Develop character in kids, he said, and well-rounded academic pursuits would follow apace.

He opened his prep school in 1966, in Bath, Maine. The school and living quarters for Hyde School ("A Preparation for Life School" for males and females from age 13 through 19) are in a mansion built by a former Maine shipping industrialist and has a spacious campus with extensive athletic facilities.

Joe Gauld sat at lunch recently and reviewed the first decade of his educational experiment. Gauld is a mustachioed, athletic-looking expressive man of 49 who bears a resemblance to the actor Robert Shaw.

"The first thing you have to know about Hyde," he said, "is that we use no methods. We just do what we think works with a particular kid. We've got about 200, usually divided about evenly between boys and girls. And each kid is unique.

"Most of our students have had problems before coming to us. Maybe they weren't doing well academically, maybe they were doing okay academically but were lifeless, spiritless.

"So we want to bring them into a community thing. The kids put controls on each other, and the faculty, of course, plays an important role in the development. But we also wanted the kids to have a say in their destiny, and so we have open evaluation sessions in the auditorium."

Gauld remembers when Ann Legg, the wife of the current headmaster of the school, Ed Legg (a cum laude Harvard graduate) had her first evaluation in this public forum. She was told she was too stiff, too traditional, and broke down into tears. Wellesley hadn't prepared her for this.

"But she was willing to work at improvement, the same kind of improvement she expected from the kids," said Gauld, "and now she looks forward to the evaluations."

There is no drinking nor smoking allowed for students. When one student defied the rules and got drunk, it was left for his fellow students to devise a punishment.

He was made to dig a big grave and then toss in a can of beer and cover up the grave. The punishment was heavy with the symbolism of burying "a bad image," but Gauld felt it worked.

Hyde is unusual in another way. The school believes that it cannot be effective with the students unless the parents are deeply involved. "You can't send your kids to Hyde and then forget about them — as if you'd dropped them down a well," said Gauld.

Prospective students are interviewed with their parents when they apply for admission. Sometimes the questions may be so penetrating that kids will break down, bolt from the room or clam up out of fear ("What have you done in your life that you're proud of? That you're ashamed of? What do you think you'll be doing in 20 years?")

Questions to parents may also shake them to the core, particularly in regard to parental responsibility. (One parent remembers that it was at one of these sessions he realized that his daughter had intimidated him: "If you punish me, Daddy, I'm going to run away from home." In the session, the father said, he gained a new courage to deal with her.)

Parents of Hyde students regularly get together in groups — usually without faculty memers — and discuss their mutual problems. Students are taken from all over the country, and from a variety of social classes.

Hyde has a stipulation that if, at the end of the school year, the student and his parents felt the school failed them, then they are reimbursed their $4,300 to $6,000 back (depending on parents' capability to pay — not counting scholarships offered to indigents).

There has not been a run on Hyde's bank account from the disgruntled.

"But sometimes we've had kids who got diplomas send them back right away, in essence saying that it meant nothing to them," said Gauld. "But a few years later, they usually write and request to have the diplomas back.

"I think that's great. I have no problem at all looking those people right in the eyes."

Where are all the flag poles?

The weekend of April 10 my husband and I decided it was time we had a permanent flag pole for the side of our house in order to fly our flag everyday.

We combed the Mount Prospect area, going to seven stores, including department, drug and hardware. Would you believe in this our Bicentennial year we could not find one flag pole or flag. One store had a '76 flag but no pole.

We have two flags ourselves but we needed the pole and we were willing to buy another flag if it came as a package deal.

I am truly appalled. Where are the Boy Scouts? What a great project it would make to sell these door to door. I may have to send to Hayward, Wis., where I know the Boy Scouts there are selling the flags and poles, in order to purchase one.

Candidate says election a sham

I've lost a school board election. Losing has afforded me one of the most back handed compliments I have ever received. This open letter is to those people who directly or indirectly stood by and watched silently while all the candidates "rights" were being violated.

Why did it become necessary to hand out "Blue sample ballots" to prospective voters? To those four people on the sample ballot, why did you not insist on a fair election? I would have, had I been in the position to insure your rights to a free election. And finally, to those people who instigated the original "plan." You've won.

The philosophy of St. Stephens School is to "foster the development of the Christian person in an atmosphere of faith, love, freedom and justice." May I ask, when does this direct quote from the St. Stephens School Handbook apply to you? Congratulations. The election was a sham and I'm embarrassed to have been a part of it.

Public should be aware of C.P.R.

On Monday evening, April 12, I attended an excellent class on cardiopulmonary resuscitation given by the Mount Prospect Fire Dept. I understand this class is given the second Monday of every month at the Randhurst shopping center in the Town Hall meeting room. Due to the limited class size, reservations must be made with the Fire Department.

The public should be informed on C.P.R., and I urge people to take advantage of this fine service provided by your fire department.

Bell to shift 140 workers from area

Approximately 140 workers at the Illinois Bell Telephone Company's office, 44 S. Vail St., Arlington Heights, will face transfers in September when the company realigns its operations.

The employes affected by the company's decision to consolidate its operations all work in the Arlington Heights accounting office.

"All of our regular accounting employes in Arlington Heights will be offered other jobs with the company," Glenn L. DeWeirdt, district manager of comptroller operations, said. "Many of those jobs will be in the Illinois Bell North center accounting office at 2401 W. Grace St., Chicago, at company headquarters in downtown Chicago or at other locations in suburban operations."

DeWeirdt cited economic reasons for the consolidation.

"We've found that we can provide more efficient and economical billing by bringing together our customer billing operations," he said.

The realignment will be gradual with no changes being made before September, DeWeirdt said.

Barry Easthope, a public relations representative for Illinois Bell, said other uses for the Arlington Heights office are now being discussed.

17-mile walk for March of Dimes May 16

A 17-mile walk to raise money for the National Foundation, March of Dimes, will be held May 16 in the Northwest suburbs.

Participants will gather at 9 a.m. that day at Prospect High School, 801 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect, to register and begin their hike through the area. Check points on the route will have water and restroom facilities. Free refreshments, from the Burger King restaurants in Des Plaines and Palatine, also will be served to all who participate.

The rock group Saharah will give a two-hour concert at the end of the walk.

Walkers are asked to collect pledges for each mile they hike. Two 10-speed bicycles will be awarded to the individuals who collect the most money for the March of Dimes.

The walk route has been set in cooperation with police departments in the six communities involved. The Illinois National Guard will supervise the walk.

For more information, call the March of Dimes at 341-1370.

A FLAG OF DEFIANCE

One of the most powerful and popular of colonial flag symbols was the rattlesnake. Benjamin Franklin used a "curved and sliced" rattler on the masthead of his famous Gazette, with the warning "Join or Die." America's first naval Commander-in-Chief, Esek Hopkins, had for his personal flag a coiled rattler on a yellow field with another warning, "Don't Tread on Me."

Many colonists felt the rattler should be a part of the official flag of a united colonies. They argued:

"The rattlesnake is found only in America. It has bright eyes with no lids, symbolizing constant vigilance. It never attacks first. It never surrenders. It never strikes without warning. It commonly has 13 separate yet firmly united rattles on its tail. Each rattle makes little noise by itself, but the 13 together alarm the boldest of men."

Our flag might have had a rattlesnake but for the still stronger argument of those colonists who could not see "how or why a venomous serpent could be the emblem of a brave and honest folk fighting to be free." It was an argument to which even the rattlesnake yielded.

LONG GONE. Western Illinois University weightmen Bill Edwards, left, of Homer, Ill. and Bill Chlebek of Wheeling turned the clock back 20 years and went to the hairstyle of the 1950's with crewcuts. "We just got tired of that long stuff, and boy is it nice to get up in the morning and not have to worry about taking care of it," said Edwards. Edwards is the defending national discus champion in NCAA Division II, and Wheeling High product Chlebek recently set a new Western record in the hammer throw.

Cubs' stall tactics backfire; Yankees bounce White Sox

The Cubs and Montreal Expos played "Beat the Clock" Wednesday afternoon in a contest that will not be shown to visitors of baseball's Hall of Fame in Cooperstown.

The game was suspended because of darkness after six innings with Montreal leading the Cubs, 11-3.

The game became almost a comedy in the fifth when rain was threatening. The Expos were trying to get the inning over to make the game official while the Cubs were doing everything they could to prevent it.

Montreal's Tim Foli, after a triple in the top of the fifth, was out trying to stretch it into an inside-the-park home run, or simply, to create an out.

Pete Mackanin followed with a triple, but held up when he obviously would have been out at the plate and scored, instead on pitcher Woody Fryman's single.

Fryman, meanwhile, was out at second by a wide margin as he continued running through the rain in an effort to retire the side.

In the bottom of the fifth, three outs from becoming an official game, Cub Rick Monday provoked rain with his slow-motion tactics at the plate, but after another delay, the game resumed.

Home runs by Mike Jorgensen and Jerry White highlighted a 15-hit Montreal attack on four Cub pitchers.

The game started 14 minutes late because of rain and there were four rain delays of 30, 31, 20 and 27 minutes for a total interference of two hours and two minutes.

The game will be completed today before the regularly-scheduled game with the continuation beginning at noon.

Chambliss got the Yankees off in front with a two-run homer in the first inning and singled home a third run during the a three-run sixth outburst which gave New York a 7-2 lead.

Rivers doubled home a run in the sixth inning and hit a two-run single in the seventh when the Yankees ballooned their lead to 9-2.

May yielded two runs in the second inning on singles by Ralph Garr and Cleon Jones, a wild pitch and an error by Willie Randolph and was tagged for a two-run homer by Pete Varney in the eighth. He was replaced by Sparky Lyle after Jack Brohamer hit a two-run triple in the ninth.

Randolph had four hits while Rivers, Chambliss and Thurman Munson each had three as the Yankees tagged Hamilton with his first loss of the season and sixth in a White Sox uniform.

Jones had two hits for the Sox who will be idle today before returning home Friday for a three-game set with the Boston Red Sox.

Hamilton beached

From Herald Wire Services

NEW YORK — Remember, Dave Hamilton? He was the pitcher the White Sox received from Oakland with Chet Lemon for Stan Bahnsen and Skip Pitlock.

Hamilton has been somewhat of a forgotten man this spring for the White Sox despite several sparkling relief stints last summer. He was 6-5 with a 2.84 earned run average in 1975.

The 6-foot, 190-pound left-hander received a starting assignment Wednesday in New York against the Yankees, and he may become a forgotten man once again.

New York pounded Hamilton for 10 hits and seven earned runs in 5-2/3 innings and went on to coast to a 10-7 victory over the Sox in Yankee Stadium. Hamilton was followed by Jack Kucek and Francisco Barrios, and nobody could slow down New York.

Chris Chambliss and Mickey Rivers drove in three runs each to give Rudy May his first pitching victory of the season.

NFL releases schedule for 1976; news is not encouraging for Bears

A six-week stretch that could be described as murderous for Jack Pardee's young Bears is the heart of Chicago's 1976 National Football League schedule released Wednesday.

Over a 35-day span starting Oct. 3, Pardee's second Bear squad will be pitted against the Washington Redskins, Minnesota Vikings twice, Los Angeles Rams, Dallas Cowboys, and Oakland Raiders.

Hoping to improve their 4-10 record of a year ago, the Bears both open and close their 1976 season in Soldier Field. This 57th Bear team will face the Detroit Lions here Sept. 12 on the NFL debut weekend and finish against the Denver Broncos in Chicago Dec. 12.

Other home opponents are the Redskins, Vikings, Raiders, Atlanta Falcons and Green Bay Packers.

On the road, the Bears must face their three NFC Central Division rivals — the Vikings, Lions and Packers — as well as the Rams, Cowboys, San Francisco 49ers and Seattle Seahawks.

All 14 games are scheduled for 1:05 kickoffs and all are on Sundays. The Super Bowl is scheduled for the Rose Bowl, Pasadena, Calif., Sunday, Jan. 9.

The Seattle Seahawks will meet the St. Louis Cardinals in their new 65,000-seat Kingdome and the Tampa Bay Bucs will visit the Houston Oilers when the National Football League opens its season Sept. 12, according to the official schedule.

The Seahawks, competing in the NFC as a member of the Western Division in 1976, will play each of the other NFC teams once plus Tampa Bay while the Bucs, assigned to the AFC western Division, will play each of the other 13 AFC clubs plus Seattle in their initial NFL seasons.

The Bucs will play their home opener on Sunday, Sept. 19, against San Diego at the newly-renovated, 71,000-seat Tampa Stadium.

Other contests highlighting the Sept. 12 inaugural weekend include the world champion Pittsburgh Steelers at Oakland and the NFC champion Dallas Cowboys entertaining Philadelphia. Miami is at Buffalo in the first Monday night nationally-televised contest on Sept. 13.

There are seven new head coaches in the NFL this season. They are John McKay at Tampa Bay, Bill Johnson at Cincinnati, Lou Holtz with the New York Jets, Jack Patera at Seattle, Hank Stram at New Orleans, Monte Clark at San Francisco and Dick Vermeil at Philadelphia. Only Stram, who coached Kansas City for 15 seasons, previously was a head coach in the NFL.

With the addition of Seattle and Tampa Bay, the interconference games between AFC and NFC teams have been reduced from 40 to 28.

Hoping for hole-in-one? The odds: 42,952 to 1!

Paul Logan
Associate Sports Editor

"I think you could hear me all over Palatine," said Tom Johnson.

He was referring to his shouts of joy after scoring a hole-in-one last Friday at Palatine Hills golf course's seventh.

Johnson's ace was the first reported to the Herald this season. It was also this 34-year-old Rolling Meadows resident's first ever.

Dave Schultz, an 18-year-old student at Wheeling High School, matched Johnson's feat on Easter Sunday.

"It was the greatest feeling in my life," said Schultz, who recorded his ace at Chevy Chase's 16th.

Although Schultz is almost a scratch golfer, he admited "the hole after I was so happy I couldn't hit the ball. I was still shaking, I guess. I just couldn't get over that it had happened to me."

Will it happen to you this season?

The odds are stacked against you. It's 42,952 to 1 for an average golfer on one hole or 10,738 to 1 in one round (on a regulation 18-hole course with four par threes).

According to Golf Digest, 25,372 holes-in-one were reported last year — the largest total ever. Here are some of the more unusual 1975 aces from the magazine's March issue:

• Grant and Mary Anderson became the nation's first husband-wife tandem to ever ace the same hole together. It eas a 125-yard blind hole that the Portland, Ore., couple mastered. The only other time such a feat ever occurred was in Scotland in 1963.

• The wildest ace was stroked by Perry Crowley. The Reno, Nev., native sliced a drive on a 190-yard hole. The ball skipped twice on the water, hit a sand rake and bounced into the hole.

• A 9-year-old from Essex, England might as well try a different sport. While most people play a lifetime without that one super shot, this youngster did it on his first swing ever! The 80-yeard tee shot was hit by — are you ready for this ? — Jamie Wedge!

• Since we're playing the name game with holes-in-one, how about these — Helen Hacker, Los Angeles, Steve Ace, Foxburg, Pa., and Carter Snead, Bluefield, W. Va. The latter lived up to that famous last name with three aces in 1975.

• A trio of golfers have a real rarity to brag about at the 19th hole — left-handed/right-handed doubles. Richard Powers, Sacramento, Sol Back, Middletown, Ohio, and Ira Hobbs, Pebble Beach, completed aces from both sides of the ball last year.

• It was quite a summer for the Don Dugan family of Brockport, N.Y. Daughter Chris aced the eighth hole at her home course on May 30, her dad conquered the 13th on July 4 and her mom mastered the eighth on July 27.

• Chuck Gilson topped that less-than-a-month ace explosion by doing it all by himself. The Eatontown, N.J., native had three in 27 days on three different holes!

• However, earning the title "World Ace of the Year" was Sam Mitchel of Roslyn, N.Y. He scored a mind-boggling five! Mitchel had one each on Jan. 1 and 2. After several months of recovering from back-to-back shockers, he carded solos in May, August and November.

If you're confident that this will be your year, here are some all-time Golf Digest hole-in-one records to shoot at:

Longest by a man — 444 yards by Robert Mitera, Omaha (1965).

Longest by a woman — 393 yards by Marie Robie, Wollaston, Mass. (1949).

Oldest man — 93-year-old George Miller, Anaheim, Calif. (1970).

Oldest woman — 81-year-old Edna Hussey, Cincinnati (1969).

Youngest girl — a pair of 9-year-olds — Mary Venker, Bloomington, Ill. (1971) and Susan Thompson, Garden Grove, Calif. (1973).

Youngest boy — 6-year-old (plus one month and one week) Tommy Moore, Hagerstown, Md., on a 145-yard hole (1969).

I wonder if little Tommy knew how to sign his scorecard?

Will this be your year for an ace?

Honest Pleasure tests Blue Grass

Although Honest Pleasure rates as the overwhelming favorite, the owners of six other three-year-old thoroughbreds have elected to challenge the 1975 juvenile champion in today's $100,000-added Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland Race Course.

Early indications were that a field of only three would go to the post for the 1-1/8-mile Blue Grass, one of the final and most prestigious preps for the Kentucky Derby, after Honest Pleasure continued his fine 1975 form this spring with three impressive victories.

However, when entries closed Wednesday morning at the scenic race track, Honest Pleasure was joined by Proud Birdie, Inca Roca, Riverside Sam, Deram' De Lucky, Certain Roman and Peter Puck.

California's triple crown winner, "Telly's Pop," has been removed from the Kentucky Derby slate. The removal of the thoroughbred from the classic race at Churchill Downs was made by co-owners Telly Savalas and Howard Koch.

The horse reportedly is suffering from soreness in the back and left front leg and will undergo x-ray. Telly's Pop will rest and be examined for a period of 3 to 45 days, but is expected to be back on the tracks in the fall.

White Sox mend uniform ripoff

Manager Paul Richards of the White Sox Wednesday apologized to New York Yankee club owner George Steinbrenner for "popping off" at him following Tuesday's loss. "Obviously, I misunderstood certain reports before the effects of losing a really tough game were off," Richards wrote to Steinbrenner. "I hereby apologize for 'popping off.' "

Earlier Wednesday the White Sox formally protested the loss on the grounds that they were not allowed to wear uniforms approved by American League President Lee MacPhail. Under pressure from Manager Billy Martin the umpires ordered pitchers Bart Johnson and Clay Carroll to cut the lower portions of a white sleeve protruding from the White Sox otherwise dark blue uniforms.

Martin argued that the white ball coming out of the white sleeve constituted illegal dress. "Richards' letter is proof of his class," said Steinbrenner. "It is good to have Bill Veeck and Richards back in baseball."

The White Sox added, however, that they have billed the Yankees $18 for the repairs that were made in the uniforms.

Campbell to step down from NHL

National Hockey League Prssident Clarence Campbell, Liberal Senator Louis Giguere and three other businessmen were to be arraigned Thursday on charges of fraud and conspiracy against the Canadian federal government.

Campbell, 70, and three other former officers of Sky Shops Export Ltd. were alleged to have used a preferential sale of shares to give Giguere $95,000 in 1972 as part of a bid to gain a competitive-free lease extension to 1980 for the company's duty-free shop at Montreal's Dorval airport.

Campbell, who was president of Sky Shops at the time, had little reaction when he was reached in Philadelphia where he had been attending an NHL playoff game. "I don't have a word to say about the charges," Campbell, who has said he was stepping down as NHL president, said. "I'm going to respond to them in court."

Czechs check U.S. hockey team

Undefeated Czechoslovakia beat the United States 5-1 (2-0, 3-1, 0-0) in the World Ice Hockey Championships Wednesday. The victory in the first match of the final round in group A, which competes for first through fourth place in the final standings, was pure routine for the Czechoslovaks, their eighth in eight games. In the preliminary round, Czechoslovakia beat the U.S. 10-2.

Southern's gym camp open for third season

The summer Gymnastics Camp at Southern Illinois University, now entering its third year of existence, has established itself as one of the finest training grounds for young gymnasts.

At first, SIU had the most thorough testing and evaluation program in the country. But for 1976, even this has been augmented.

There will be, in addition to the strength and flexibility evaluation, an extremely thorough evaluation of execution of fundamentals, injury history and a psychological evaluation.

This psychological evaluation is to aid in instruction and to determine factors related to progress and injury.

The camp program of testing will be cooordinated with the national program of the Safety Assn., and with the NACGC Research Committee, who are cooperating to advance the study of gymnastics.

The SIU Gymnastics Camp refuses to advertise its "name" coaches and counselors, for the camp believes that its success depends not on the individual staff members but on the total cooperation among all the staff in executing the program.

Each year, the United States Gymnastics Federation operates a Junior Olympic program and the top winners are invited to attend an Olympic Development camp.

For 1976 the Junior Olympics are scheduled for Ft. Worth, Tex. ending June 12. The Olympic Development Camp will be held at SIU from June 13 to June 26.

SIU also features 25 fulltime instructors, health service, physical therapists, air-conditioned gym and air-conditioned residence halls.

Students at the camp who have enrolled already come from 16 different states as far away as Hawaii.

Half of the performers in the finals of the Illinois State Championships were SIU campers and two thirds of the event winners in the NCAA Eastern Regional went to the SIU camp.

Information about the SIU camp can be obtained by contacting Dr. H. J. Biesterfeldt, Gym Camp, SIU Arena 118, Carbondale, Ill. 62901.

Park district is helping school

Fan's forum

(Ed. Note: The following letter was received by The Herald from Prospect Athletic Director George Gattas. In his letter Gattas details the swimming situation at Prospect and the relationship between the school and the park district.)

With the 1975-76 high school swimming season behind us, I believe it is now time to address myself to this statement concerning the situation that exists regarding one of the Mount Prospect Park District swimming pools and the Prospect High School swimming team.

During the swim season just completed, there was debate in the local press concerning our swimming team's practice time at the Mount Prospect Park District's Kopp Pool. Most of the conversation seemed to be critical of the park district.

With this "statement," I would like to set the record straight concerning our swimming times at the park district's Kopp Pool and the relationship between the Mount Prospect Park District and the administrations of both School Dist. 214 and Prospect High School.

First, it may come as a surprise to many swimming parents to learn that Kopp Pool at Dempster Junior High School is owned jointly by the Mount Prospect Park District and School District 59. Not only do they share in the expenses of constructing and operating this pool, but they also share in the available swimming time as well. In the current discussion relative to the use of this pool by Prospect High School, this is a rather important point.

Of the total swimming time available at this pool, only one half of the time belongs to the Mount Prospect Park District and they are making some of that time available to our swimmers.

True, during this past season this time came early in the morning, 6:30 to 8:30, but it was a situation that, under the circumstances, could not be helped. We, at Prospect High School, do not have a pool. The park district does. The park district has a primary responsibility to implement its own basic swimming education classes in the time available to it. During this past season, the early time our swim team swam was the only time the park district could make available to us. And, we knew it.

But last season is gone. What of the 1976-77 season that is on its way?

Since the end of the swimming season in February, there have been a number of meetings between the athletic administration of Prospect — including myself and our principal Mr. Spacapan — and the staff and board of the park district. Also participating in these meetings has been Mr. Kinneman of Dist. 214.

What has been particularly gratifying to all of us from Prospect and Dist. 214 has been the genuine effort exhibited by Messrs. Cooper and Tayler, and the park board itself, in addressing itself to the question of practice times for our swimming team for next fall and the sincere interest THEY have exhibited in attempting to solve OUR problem.

We have been most pleased at hearing Mount Prospect Park District President Robert Jackson say to us, "We want you to know that the Mount Prospect Park District wants to cooperate with Prospect High School in every way we can. We have done so in the past and we will continue to do so in the future. However, we have a responsibility to the residents of our district, but within the limits of this responsibility we want also to cooperate as best we can with Prospect High School."

Not only have we appreciated Mr. Jackson's position in this matter but we have also appreciated the encouragement and help we have received from both their staff and the other commissioners in trying to establish better practice times for us for next season.

At this very moment, the athletic department at Prospect is working closely with the staff at the park district on next year's program. We are all confident that our conversations with the park district will produce an improved practice swim schedule for next season.

But whatever the outcome of these conversations, one fact is certain. We are certain that the board of the Mount Prospect Park District will have extended itself to its fullest in attempting to resolve this issue to the best interests of all concerned.

Pee Wee Hawks return with national honors

The Chicago Minor Pee Wee hockey team of 12-year olds just returned from Philadelphia where they became the first team from Illinois to ever win the sanctioned Amateur Hockey Assoc. of United States National Tournament.

The AHAUS is the governing body of all amateur hockey and last year controlled 10,844 teams.

The Hawks swept through the round-robin tournament with wins over Seattle 9-2, Minnesota 7-3, the Philadelphia Little Flyers 5-3 and Michigan 13-3.

They then met a team from Massachusetts, who was also 4-0 in the tournament, for the championship and beat them 11-1 to become the best in the country.

Coach Gary Bryan credited his teams' success to many factors but mostly the boys themselves.

The goal from tryouts through the end of the season was to capitalize on speed, self-motivation and togetherness.

The Hawks also scheduled the toughest competition possible, including teams from the older Bantam division, in order to build their hockey talents.

Realizing they had been working very hard all season in preparing for next year, it was agreed following the 5-3 win over Philadelphia that the team had played their last game as Pee Wees.

The final two games would be played as if they were Bantams. They wished only to play in such a manner that they would be a credit to the Illinois Amateur Hockey Association.

By winning a national championship the Chicago Minor Pee Wee Hawks did just that.

Cockroaches — they bug 90% of us

by LYNN ASINOF

You'll see it dashing across your kitchen counter, scurrying up a cabinet wall or escaping into a box of whole wheat cereal.

It's a cockroach.

It's relatives have been here for the past 200 million years, and it's not about to go away for good. Almost everyone has or will share their home with one.

THERE ARE OTHER household pests, many more annoying, who do their best to keep up with cockroaches. Silverfish, which date back only 150 million years, are common, as are ants, spiders, moths, wasps and termites.

The cockroach, however, is king.

Entymologist Phyllis Kerstein of the Advanced Exterminating Service Inc., Chicago, estimated that 90 per cent of all dwelling units in the U.S. house a cockroach or two.

Many people don't like to admit they have problems with the nasty little creatures which hide during the day and forage at night. Cockroaches carry filth on their legs, damage fabrics and upholstery, transmit disease and have a fetid odor.

BUT HAVING ROACHES, according to Ms. Kerstein, is nothing to be ashamed of.

"Having roaches is not a sign of bad housekeeping in itself, but keeping roaches is," she said.

Getting rid of cockroaches is like getting rid of most household pests. The proper pesticide must be used in the proper proportions, and it should be done carefully.

Stanley Rachesky, entymologist and pesticide advisor for the University of Illinois Cooperative Extension Service, said homeowners can take care of most pest problems by themselves.

"The homeowner can control 99.9 per cent of all his insect problems himself — except termites," Rachesky said. He said information about proper use of insecticides is available through the extension service programs. The materials are available at hardware stores.

IN MANY CASES, however, it is easier to call in an exterminator who will charge between $18 and $30 an hour, Rachesky said.

"Anyone with an insect problem should contact a reputable exterminator if they cannot do the work themselves," Rachesky said. He said a reputable exterminating firm will belong to both the state and national trade association and will be able to provide references.

Many exterminating firms work on a monthly contract basis, while others will make single visits and offer a short-term guarantee. The type of service needed depends on the problem, and exterminators don't like to quote ballpark prices.

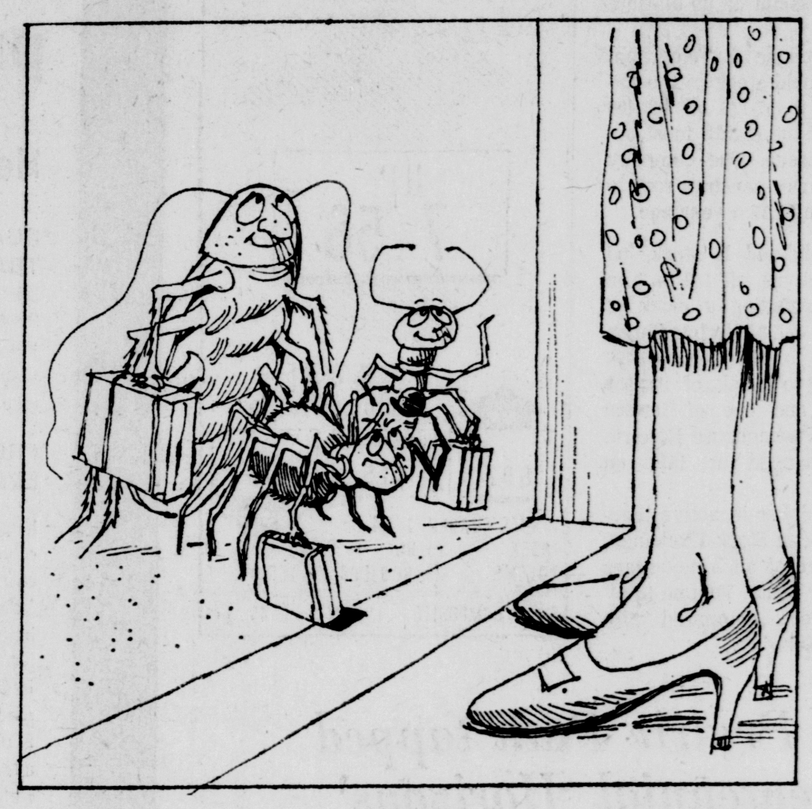
Jim McDanieil of International Exterminator Co., Inc., Chicago, said he has a simple rule for when to call an exterminator.

"Try the can of Raid first, and when it doesn't work call an exterminator," he said.

HOUSEHOLD PESTS have their seasons, and spring is the season that many homeowners begin to notice that other creatures are sharing their house.

Termites, for example, swarm in the spring as part of mating. The Northwest suburbs have relatively few termites, although experts say termite populations in the entire Chicago area are gradually increasing.

"They're not out there yet, but it is probably only five years away," Ms. Kerstein said of termites in the Northwest suburbs. She said there are many different theories on why the wood-eating insects are gradually moving north, including an over-all warming trend.



Because termites are a recent addition to the area, most homes were built without termite pre-treament, generally considered the most effective protection against termites. Pretreatment puts a protective chemical barrier between the ground where the termites live and the house at the time of construction.

TERMITES ARE one of the most expensive pests to get rid of because the exterminator has to drill holes through the concrete foundation, trench the earth and saturate the ground. Rachesky estimated that a termite job would cost from $300 to $600.

Wasps also make an appearance in the spring, but McDaniel said no effective exterminating can be done at this time.

"It's the new young queen and she is looking for a place to build her house," he said, noting that she will not attack because she has nothing to protect.

"We get thousands of calls on this and there is nothing very much we can do until the wasp has established a nest," he said.

Other common pest problems that show up in the spring include:

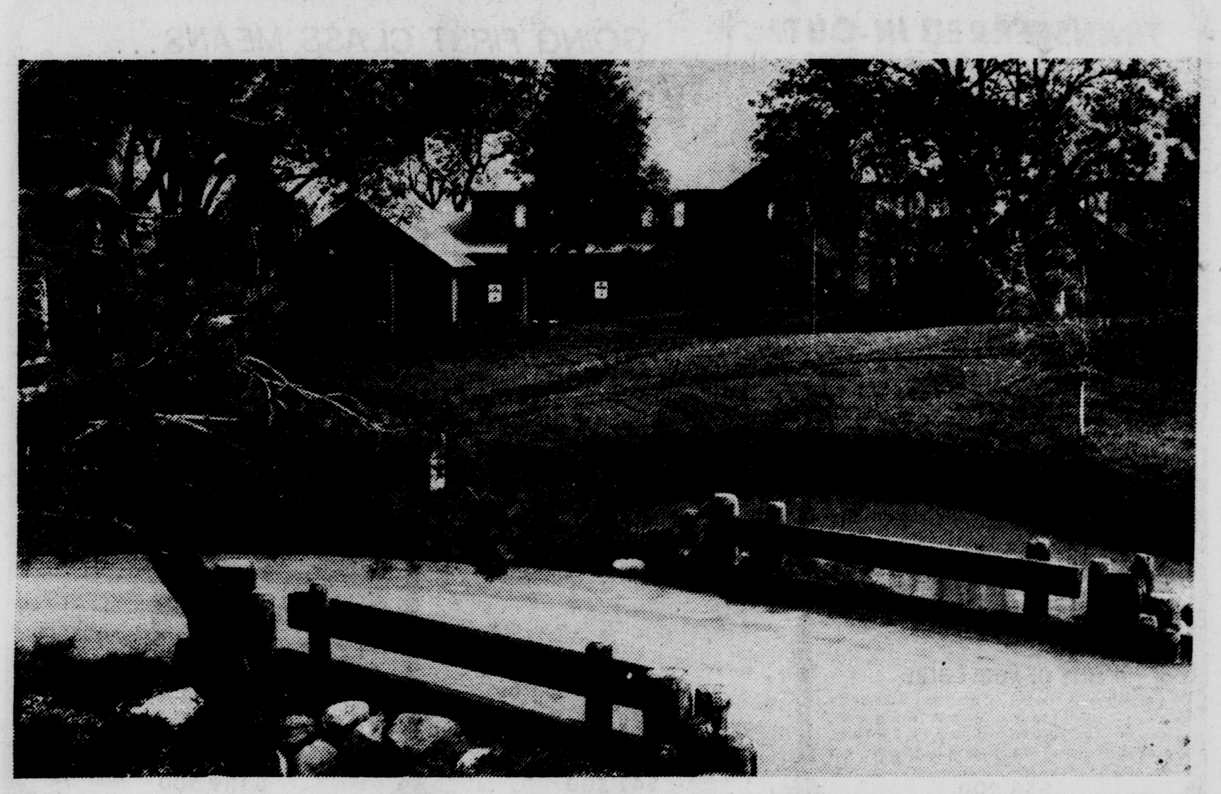
- Mice that come inside in the spring to make nests.
- Oriental roaches, also called waterbugs, which climb into the house through the plumbing to get away from storm water filling sewers. Once in the house, they stay.
- Carpenter ants also swarm in warm weather, although they are noticeable at other times. These ants nest in wood, but do not eat like the termite. They require at least 14 per cent moisture, and are likely to nest where there are leaks or stopped gutters.
- Clover mites may show up in newly seeded or newly developed areas. They appear as tiny reddish specks on windows and walls. They do no actual damage, but make a mess. They disappear in the hot weather and return in the fall.
- Ants and spiders are one of the most common problems in the Northwest suburbs, largely because new buildings have been put up over areas where both insects live. Ants can be found in the winter in homes that have radiant heating.

Other bugs that can be a problem include cereal bugs such as weevils and silverfish, which are attracted to paste in books and wallpaper.

Charles O'Hara of Anderson Exterminating Co., Chicago, said there is no one thing that attracts bugs to a house or apartment.

"Sometimes it's housekeeping, sometimes it isn't," he said.

"It's a normal, healthy thing," O'Hara said. "If we didn't have them, we'd be in trouble."



THE CROSSINGS, a 550-home townhouse community in Buffalo Grove, has received a certificate of merit for its design from the National Landscape Assn.

Brickman wins landscape award

Theodore Brickman Co., Long Grove, landscape architects and contractors, has received a certificate of merit from the National Landscape Assn. for the design of The Crossings, a community of 550 townhouses in Buffalo Grove.

The award was one of six presented nationally as part of the association's annual residential design awards program to encourage improved residential landscape design.

According to Dick Brickman, company president, the major consideration given to the landscaping of The Crossings was to develop a country setting that would soften the high density of the project and be compatible with the surrounding farm lands.

WATER, TIMBER PILINGS and boulder retaining walls, as well as select pine trees, were used to catch the passing motorists' attention, but still conform to the surrounding land uses.

Landscaping is more than the planting of trees, shrubs, flowers, and grass, Brickman said. It also includes reshaping or recontouring the land, and this was a key part of the landscaping plan at The Crossings, he said. Originally flat farm land, the site has been transformed into an area of gently rolling slopes through the building of mounds called berms and the digging of lakes.

The two lakes built thus far perform several functions, Brickman said. They retain excess rain during and after a storm. They are also used for fishing and boating.

Contrary to popular opinion, there is no one right savings plan for everyone.

No matter where you look, someone is trying to separate you from your hard earned dollars with tempting investment promises. But the facts show that over the long run a regular savings program has been the best investment the average individual can make. Not just because of rates, but because of guaranteed security.

Today First Federal Savings can help you tailor-make the savings program which best fits your needs, from 6 different savings plans. And because no one individual has the same needs as another, the important idea to grasp is that a savings program should reflect your objectives both long and short term.

The basis for successful savings is, of course, the passbook. This account provides maximum flexibility for a regular savings program and for those unexpected expenses which arise from time to time. First Federal passbook accounts pay interest for every day your money is on deposit, from the date of deposit to the date of withdrawal at the current annual rate of 5¼%.

For those funds which you can put aside for specific short range goals, First Federal Savings has both a one or two year certificate paying 6½%.

For those available dollars which can be saved towards medium range goals, we offer a 6¾% certificate which matures in 2½ years. Longer range goals can best be served by a 4-year 7½% certificate or a new 6-year 7¾% savings certificate. And because Federal regulations apply a substantial interest penalty to any certificate account withdrawn prior to maturity, you owe it to yourself to take the time to review your savings goals with one of our savings counselors. Their knowledge can help you design a savings program which is right for you. Stop in soon to discuss your savings program at First Federal Savings of Des Plaines.

Stocks hit 3-year high; 4-day gain totals 36.37

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Dow Jones industrial average climbed to its highest level in more than three years Wednesday in the heaviest trading in a month on the New York Stock Exchange as investors hailed the economic recovery.

The Dow average, after seesawing throughout the day, climbed 7.56 points to 1,011.02 points, closing at the highest level since it finished at 1,018.66 on Jan. 23, 1973.

The rally brought the Dow's four-day gain to 36.37 points as it cracked its previous 1976 high of 1,009.21 set March 24. The blue-chip average soared 15.35 points Tuesday. The Dow's all-time high of 1,051.70 was set Jan. 11, 1973.

The volume of 26,600,000 shares, up from the 23,500,000 traded Tuesday, was the heaviest since 32,605,470 shares changed hands March 24.

THE RALLY WAS broad-based. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index gained 0.45 to 103.32, the NYSE common stock index added 0.24 to 55 and the average price of an NYSE common share increased by 15 cents.

Advances topped declines, 893 to 576, among the 1,884 issues crossing the tape, but the 415 unchanged issues demonstrated there was some investor uncertainty.

The NYSE high-speed transaction tape ran six minutes late in the first half hour of heavy trading and some investors withdrew to the sidelines until the picture cleared.

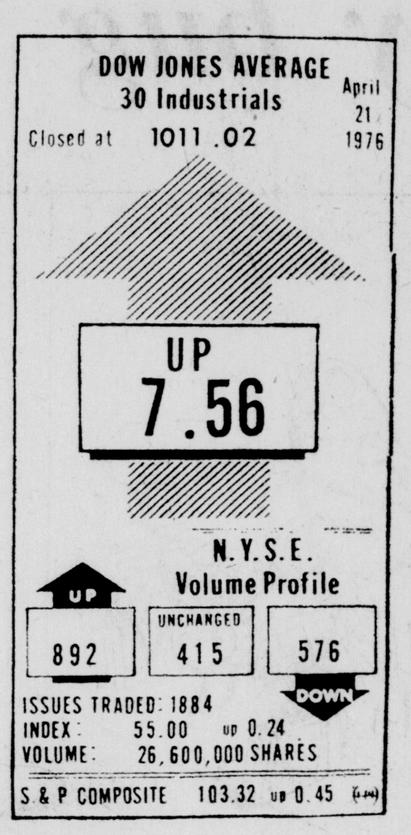
A statement by Frank Zarb, Federal Energy administrator, that chances were substantial for another oil embargo unless the nation learned to rely less on imported oil jolted the market in the late afternoon. But investors managed to shake off the news.

ANALYSTS, WHO were not surprised by profit-taking pressures, were encouraged the Dow average moved to a new high for the year because it had been blunted on four previous occasions when it crossed the 1,000 level. Many felt the market could launch an assault on its all-time highs.

American Telephone & Telegraph, the most widely held stock in the nation, gained 7/8 to 57-1/8 on 188,400 shares, making it the eighth most active Big Board issue. The company reported first quarter earnings rose to $1.39 a share from $1.17 a year ago.

Benguet Consolidated B stock led the Big Board actives, off 1/8 to 2 on 604,100 shares, including a block of 600,000 shares at 1-7/8. Norton Simon followed, up ¾ to 20¾ on 505,400 shares, including a block of 200,000 shares at 20½ and one of 100,000 shares at 20¾. Westinghouse Electric was third, unchanged at 15¾ on 266,300 shares.

Prices closed higher in active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share increased by four cents. Volume totaled 2,770,000 shares, compared with 2,630,000 traded Tuesday.



Illinois Prairie Path tapped for Bicentennial 'Horizons'

The Illinois Prairie Path is one of 200 community projects throughout the United States selected to participate in "Horizons on Display" jointly sponsored by HUD and the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration. Horizons is a major national bicentennial program designed to provide a "living laboratory" of community programs and ideas which can serve as examples to other communities for possible local adaptation.

The Illinois Prairie Path, a 40-mile hiking-biking-nature trail, occupies the former Chicago, Aurora and Elgin railroad right-of-way. It was established ten years ago by a handful of private citizens and demonstrates how citizen effort can play a vital role in developing programs or projects that benefit the community.

"Horizons on Display" is also the official United States demonstration project for Habitat, the U.N. conference on human settlements, to be held in Vancouver, Canada in May and June 1976. There are five other "Horizons on Display" sites in Illinois. Information is available by writing Illinois Prairie Path, P.O. Box 1086, Wheaton, Ill. 60187.

Building materials industry feels slight dip in profits

The building materials industry managed to come through the 1974-1975 recession with only a modest drop in profits, it was reported today by the F. W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Company.

After-tax profits of a representative group of building products manufacturers declined eight per cent from the record set in 1974. Sales last year were down six per cent.

The report is based on its F. W. Dodge Division's periodic review of a group of 52 building products firms in 14 different product categories.

George A. Christie, vice president and chief economist of the F. W. Dodge Division, said "most of the cyclical drop in industry profits was confined to the final quarter of 1974 and the first quarter of 1975. By the second quarter of 1975, the industry — paced by the housing turnaround — was on its way to a vigorous recovery."

Among those showing the strongest profit gains for the year were makers of heavy equipment, up 61 per cent; paint manufacturers, up 43 per cent; and makers of heating, ventilating and airconditioning equipment, up 21 per cent.

Full-year profits of the firms in the 14 product categories reviewed by Dodge were:

Heavy Equipment (5 companies), up 61 per cent; Coatings (2 companies), up 43 per cent; HVAC (3 companies), up 21 per cent; Controls (4 companies), up 12 per cent; Plumbing and Fixtures (3 companies), up 12 per cent; Electrical Fixtures (4 companies), up 9 per cent; Glass (3 companies), up 4 per cent; Gypsum (2 companies), down 11 per cent; Tools and Hardware (2 companies), down 16 per cent; Multiproducts (5 companies), down 19 per cent; Cement (8 companies), down 21 per cent; Forest Products (5 companies), down 27 per cent; Iron and Steel (3 companies), down 36 per cent; and Aluminum (3 companies), down 45 per cent.

200 years at the same location.

Maybe folks were a little skeptical about taking stock in America 200 years ago.

We were young. At war. With no experience.

And who knew if we'd ever pay back the money?

Well, 200 years have passed. And the U.S. government has always paid in full. To the penny.

Now that's not a bad record.

In fact, you might say we're now a pretty well-established outfit to do business with.

So join the Payroll Savings Plan and save with today's Bicentennial issue of Series E Savings Bonds. It's easy. It's automatic.

And it's safe. After 200 years, you know we're here to stay.

Now E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4% the first years). Lost, stolen or destroyed Bonds can be replaced if records are provided. When needed, Bonds can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

• Buffalo National Bank has launched a new program for its savers. Called "Instant Interest," the program is being offered to purchasers of $1,000-24 month certificates of deposit and purchasers of $2,000-12 month Certificates of Deposit who receive their interest — in-advance in the form of the famous Kris Vega 23 channel Citizens Band radio and antenna.

Jack Sharp, bank president, explained that Buffalo National customers receive the radio and antenna "instantly," instead of their interest which would be paid at the maturity of the Certificate of Deposit. He also noted that the retail value of the CB radio and antenna is significantly greater than the purchasing power for Buffalo National customers. Another way to obtain the CB radio and antenna is to take out an auto loan for three years — $3,000 or more — 20% down at the bank's regular rates and the unit can be purchased for only $99, approximately one half the retail value.

• St. Paul Federal customers will have an opportunity to participate in a unique and exciting art safari May 24.

After departure from St. Paul Federal's Hanover Park office at 10 a.m., Ms. Jeanette Barza, co-ordinator and originator of the art safari tour, will escort the participants to the home of the artists Carl Schwartz and Kay Hofmann-Schwartz. Their uniquely designed home contains three studios. The couple used special proportions when building the home, as Mrs. Hofmann-Schwartz is a sculptor and needs space for tons of alabaster.

After luncheon at the Steak Joynt in Pipers Alley, the group will then visit Elden Danhausens' North LaSalle Street home. Here the group will experience the beauty of a country garden in the midst of the city, complete with ducks, waterfalls and ponds. On the first floor of the sculptor's remodeled coach house, the living room serves as a gallery for his work. Besides demonstrating his work in progress Danhausen shows his guests an interesting collection of early American tools. Another unique attraction is his eye-catching table made of a cross-section of a 3,200 year old redwood tree.

The group will return to the Hanover Park office at approximately 4 p.m. Cost per person including luncheon is $19.50. Call 622-2888 for reservations.

Many shifts seen by 1980 in real estate

"By 1980, children of the baby boom years will have come of age — economically speaking, of course.

"The result: new directions for the real estate sector in responding to the shelter needs of more than 55 million young adults."

So said Jackson W. Goss, president and chief executive officer of Investors Mortgage Insurance Company, Boston, a subsidiary of Investors Mortgage Group, Inc. IMIC.

Goss said the ranks of Americans aged 20-35 will swell by 18 per cent over current figures by the end of the decade.

"The comparable growth of the total U.S. population over the next four years is estimated at only 4.7 per cent."

He noted two burgeoning trends among America's young adults — the tendency to remain single longer and, when married, to have fewer children — will drastically change the nature of real estate development demands.

"New buildings," Goss said, "will focus on smaller floor plans — whether in condominium apartment or townhouse settings or in single-family detached units. Multi-family communities will proliferate, attracting young households seeking built-in amenities, minimal maintenance worries and ultra-efficient use of space."

Other future features in residential market as revealed by IMIC studies include the following:

• Design options to offer a wide range of housing type to young purchasers — with special pricing flexibility.

• A return of the condominium market spurred by desire of a growing number of young people to live in urban neighborhoods.

• Growing proximity of commercial and personal service centers communities in urban and ex-urban locales.

Although they are not yet in their peak earning years, these growing numbers of young adults will continue to wield immense influence in the nation's housing, employment and consumer markets.

"The under-35ers will demand and achieve a new residential lifestyle. They will want and secure comprehensive, youth-oriented facilities and opportunities," Goss said.

Wildlife group offers data on yard habitats

Homeowners can celebrate the Bicentennial year by participating in an officially-recognized Bicentennial activity — the creation of a mini-refuge for wildlife in their own backyards.

The National Wildlife Federation's three-year-old Backyard Habitat Program is aimed at encouraging homeowners to transform their gardens and yards into dependable sources of food, water, and shelter for wildlife. Since the program began in 1973, the Federation has certified more than 400 backyards across America as suitable wildlife habitat.

The Federation, the nation's largest conservation education organization, is offering a free set of materials and information to those interested in the Backyard Habitat Program. Each packet tells how individuals can apply to have their yards certified by NWF and gives specific suggestions for the types of plants to be used in various parts of the country to help attract wildlife.

The Backyard Habitat information can be obtained by writing to: National Wildlife Federation, Dept. BY '76, 1412 16th St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

Pillow furniture from bed linens

Your home
by Carolyn Murray

Everybody's talking about pillow furniture. And until more manufacturers provide us with bases for our own brand of pillow sofas, the carpenter may have to be called in for consultation. And some of today's designer bed linens make fabulous coverings for the pillows you'll be using in the living room.

The living/dining room shown today is one example of how bed linens can take over the whole house. In the background, on a slightly higher platform area, is a simple table composed of two lacquered white cubes and one handsome plate of glass. It's the essence of simplicity. And the upholstery on the classic modern chairs is actually bed sheet fabric designed by Tai and Rosita Missoni for Fieldcrest.

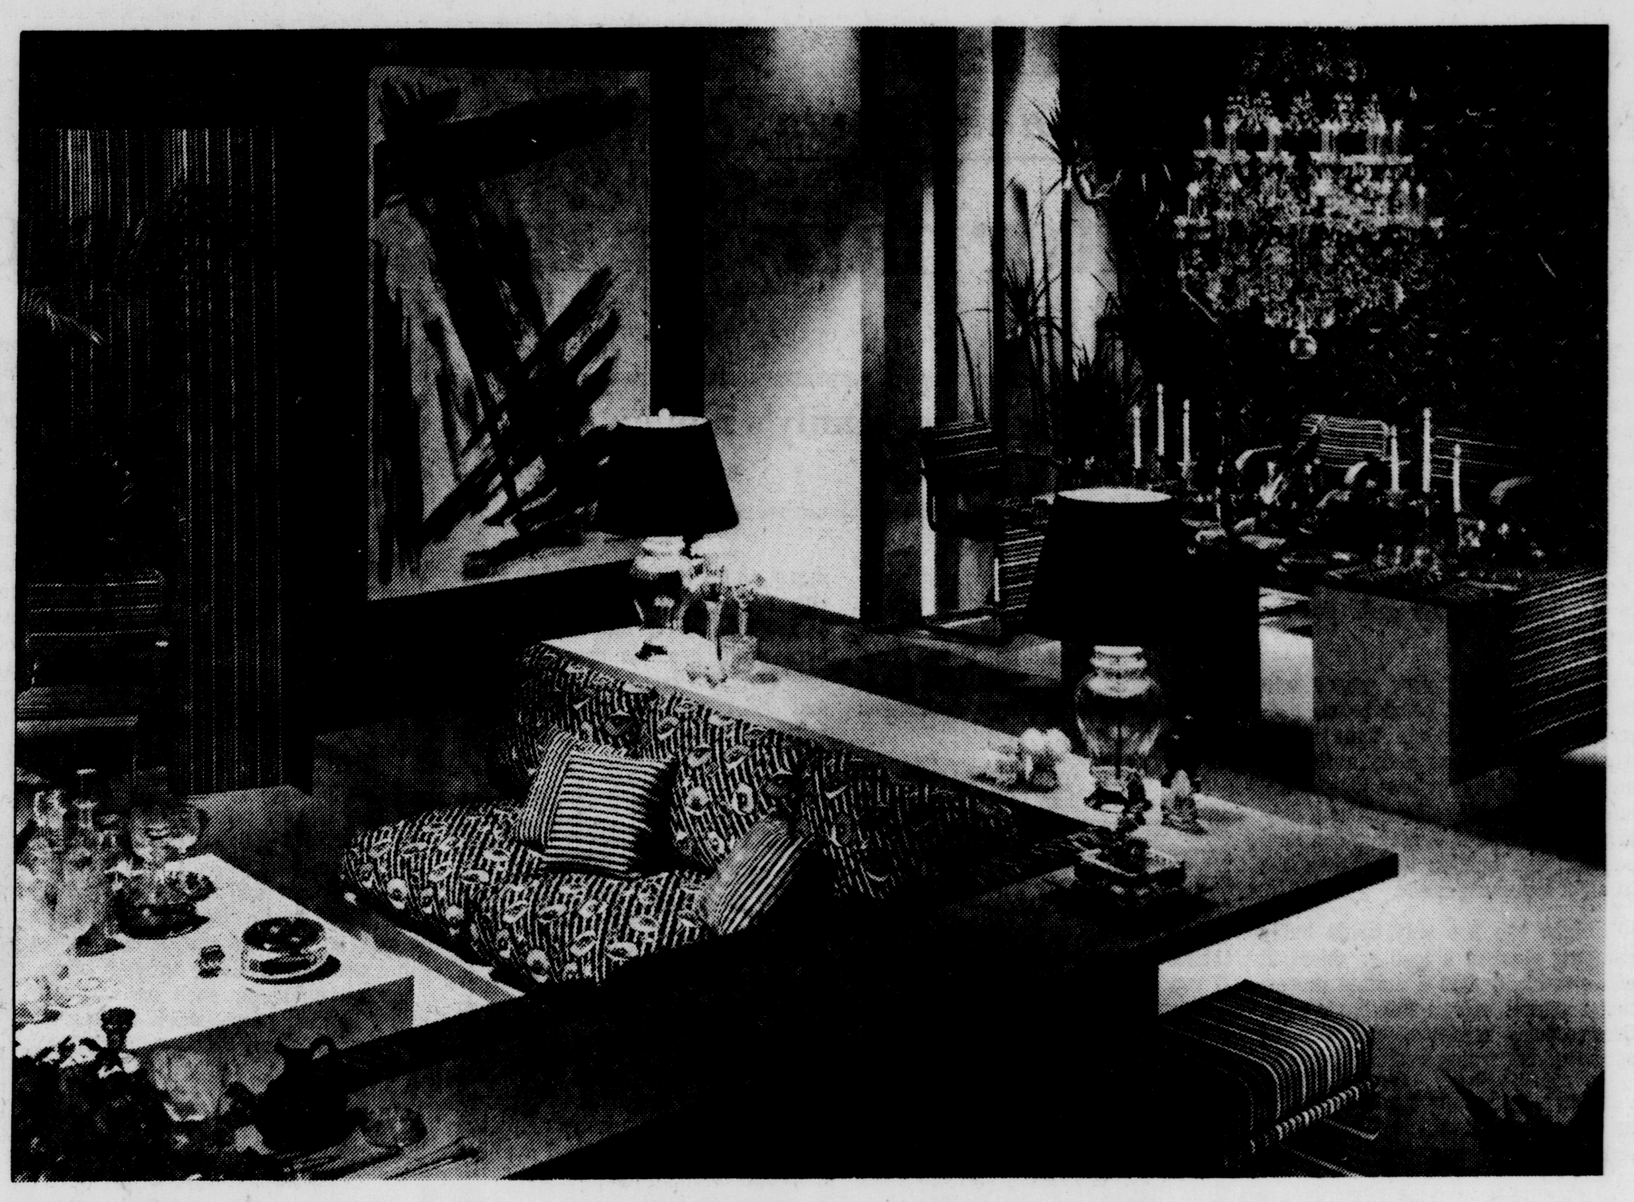
buying the clothes exhibited for their own wardrobes. Here, the Missoni color and design talents have been translated from woven to prints.

The fabric/bed linen on the table and pull-up bench in the foreground is called "Sophisticated Stripe." The upholstery fabric is "Sophisticated Poppy." Each motif also comes in more subtle tones, which the Missoni team labels "Tranquillity." Their whole concept for Fieldcrest is called "Mixed Emotions," and with a free hand the buyer can preplan a wardrobe of bed and bath linens to fit changing moods and seasonal looks.

Although designer linens are beginning to have higher-priced labels, they're still a good buy by the yard. Remember, you're paying for the artists' skill in every piece. In this case the Missoni put-together concept saves the homeowner concern about organizing schemes that are complementary.

One unique feature of the new line is the use of black as a background. We've come a long way — from the all-white approach to the pretty pastels and finally to exuberant color with splashes of fashion black.



SWITCH MOODS OR switch rooms: Bed linens that work as well on living and dining room furnishings have been co-ordinated by Rosita and Tai Missoni for Fieldcrest. In a unique collection of interplayables called "Mixed Emotions," the design team from Italy gives us the best in color and design.

You want to buy a house. It may be your first house, or your next house.

Whichever, it's no small undertaking, and time spent in some advance preparation — soul-searching, fact-finding and a little paperwork — will be time well spent.

Homes, existing or new, still are expensive — high enough to price many families out of the market. But, the advice still is buy now if you want and need a house, and if you can manage it financially.

Many factors, besides desire, go into the decision, but perhaps the first thing a family must determine is if it really wants to own a home. For most Americans this still is the case and it has been a wise move financially in recent years as property values soared.

There are some, however, whose life style dictates otherwise. Each family should decide what is best on the basis of its individual desires, needs and financial abilities. Some might find it worthwhile to scrimp in other areas to afford the house of their choice; for other families such scrimping would make home ownership onerous. For still others the responsibilities of a house might outweigh any financial benefits.

If the choice is for home ownership, the next decision is what kind of home. The handyman who enjoys nothing more than working around the house, with a wife who loves gardening, might take on a big, rundown old house on a couple of acres. The couple who view work around the house as a chore to be gotten through as quickly as possible, might better choose a condominium, which will provide the tax advantages of home ownership but not the responsibility for maintenance and upkeep.

For the family which already has a home, but needs or wants something bigger or better, the decision may be whether to buy or to upgrade the present house. Often, where the location is a good one in a neighborhood where property values are increasing, it's wise to add on and improve an existing home. For most of us, the big question is money: What can I afford? Can I get the kind of home I'd like for what I can afford? What options are there?

To get a quick idea in what price range you should be shopping for a home, the American Bankers Assn. suggests you take your gross annual income (before taxes) and multiply first by two and then by two and a half.

While this calculation is useful, ABA points out, it doesn't account for such variables as family size, assets or expenditures. Thus, you'll need first to examine your monthly fixed and discretionary expenses, determine what amount of money is available for monthly housing costs.

Deduct from your monthly take-home pay your costs for food; transportation (car and mass); car and other installment or loan payments; car insurance; savings; clothing; entertainment; telephone; life and health insurance; and other expenses such as educational or medical costs.

Once you've determined this, you will be able to tell whether fixed payments on a specific house — principal on the mortgage loan, interest on the loan, property taxes, and homeowner's insurance — are affordable and leave enough leeway for utilities, maintenance and miscellaneous costs.

An example from the ABA: Suppose you find a house for $40,000 and you have a 20 per cent down payment. That would leave $32,000 to be repaid. If you obtain a 25-year mortgage at 9 per cent interest, principal and interest would work out to $268.80 monthly. Taxes and insurance typically might come to $80 a month and utilities another $80 for a total of $423.80. Tables are available to figure mortgage costs and your banker or broker can help estimate taxes, insurance and utility payments.

B-W Hospital Therapy Products Co. leased the one-story 6,000-square-foot building located at 55 Joey Dr. The facility will be occupied by B-W Hospital Therapy Products Co. as their new home for their rapidly expanding products line for the medical field.

Portable Labs, Inc. leased the one-story 40,442-square-foot building located at 1875 Greenleaf Ave. The space was formerly occupied by Quasaar Division of Motorola Corp. and will be used by Portable Labs for the manufacturing of sophisticated filing systems.

Home builds 78-bed addition

Brookwood Healthcare Centre, Inc., 2380 Dempster St., Des Plaines, is building a new 78-bed addition to its present facilities. Groundbreaking was March 11.

The addition will be to the north end of the west wing and will be completely fire resistive. One floor of the new wing will feature extensive rehabilitative nursing.

Brookwood Healthcare Centre originally opened in 1963 with 119 beds. A five story addition was added in 1970. With the new addition, Brookwood will have approximately 370 beds making it the largest nursing home in the Northwest suburbs.

Completion of the new addition is expected about Nov. 1. With the addition of the new wing, a completely new and modernized kitchen is being installed with other areas in the home to be expanded and remodeled.

Keep equipment costs to a minimum

Consider alternatives in saving money

Managing your family's money

by MERLE E. DOWD

Facilities and equipment — a house, boat, car or appliances — soak up family dollars for long periods. One money management trick is to keep equipment costs to a minimum, particularly units that depreciate rapidly with time rather than use. The family car remains one of the big money leaks for families in all income ranges. A look at alternatives could save a bundle of new cash. For example —

Rather than put your money into two passenger cars, consider one passenger model and one light utility truck or van if you need a flexible machine for hauling camping gear, moving furniture, constructing a cabin or hauling tools. A pickup can haul heavier and bulkier items than the trunk of a passenger car.

A light van not only hauls bulky camping gear or a load of skiers, it converts easily into a limited recreational vehicle. A van also hauls tools, firewood and furniture while serving as second-car transportation.

Either a pickup or a van can serve as a passenger vehicle for commuting. Some pickups even include a second seat to carry more passengers. You may have seen claims that a pickup or van "rides like a car — works like a truck." So, if you occasionally need the hauling capacity of a truck, consider buying a vehicle you can use two ways.

Your saving from owning only one vehicle rather than two can mean as much as $800-$1,000 less spending every year. Or, if you are committed to two vehicles, owning one passenger car and one light truck — pickup or van — rather than two passenger cars makes sense from several viewpoints. If you do consider buying a truck for commuting, light hauling or recreational use, look at these dollar factors:

Pickups at the light end of the scale can match gas mileage with some of the smallest cars getting around 30 m.p.g. on the highway and 22-28 in the city. Larger pickups built on a frame comparable to a mid-size car will burn more gasoline than a similar size car. The truck may be heavier and the rear axle ratio and transmission may be sized for work rather than maximum mileage.

Vans typically burn more fuel than comparably sized passenger cars because of their bulk, weight, and driveline ratios. Thus, you should recognize a need for a van's unique characteristics — enclosed space, wide doors, and forward seating — before opting to buy one. Vans typically require higher clearance in a garage or carport.

A truck's heavy-duty suspension system comes in handy for towing a trailer. Truck components typically survive rough handling and overloads better than comfort-sprung passenger cars. While optional trailer packages are available for cars, a truck pulls a trailer with little extra cost. Transmission and rear-axle ratios in a truck will usually yield better gas mileage when towing or hauling a load than a passenger car.

Trucks, either pickups or vans, feature less styling than passenger cars and remain active over longer periods to reduce yearly depreciation. Your state may recognize the continuing value of utility vehicles and raise excise taxes — even after 10 or more years.

Since you will likely keep a pickup or van longer, consider the cost of parts. Prices for parts of all kinds have been rising rapidly, but the cost of body parts and major assemblies for imports have risen more than for domestic cars and trucks. Any parts that are not available through aftermarket suppliers, such as carburetors, ignition parts, shock absorbers, brakes and many other units used up during driving, will remain costly. Buying body parts, axle assemblies, major engine components, and driveline assemblies available only through original equipment suppliers from the factory overseas could wipe out savings from lower gasoline consumption or first cost.

Transportation continues to absorb a rising number of dollars and, for many families, a rising proportion of income. A hard look at several alternatives before committing future income to 36, 42, or 48 months of payments could mean less pressure on other spending categories. Opting for a double-duty light truck could mean overall savings during the years ahead. But, don't decide without looking at the full life-cycle costs of each alternative.

LET'S TALK IT OVER
JERRY BOUSCHARD

We sometimes suggest to prospective buyers that they keep an informal record of the properties they look at. Buying a home is a major investment which few of us can take lightly. We want to be sure we buy the property that gives us, as perfectly as possible, what we're looking for in a home.

If a buyer makes notes on each house he inspects, he can look back and remember just what especially impressed him. Keeping these notes organized into a record helps a buyer to compare properties intelligently without forgetting what may be important factors.

It also helps the "looker" to decide on a house and become a "buyer." The house he buys may be yours. Let us give you the benefit of our experience whenever you're thinking of real estate. We will make a free market analysis of your home, with no obligation on your part.

No place like home --families

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An overwhelming number of American families feel there really is no place like home, according to a government report released Monday.

Responding to a questionnaire on how they rate their community, over 70 per cent of the nation's households said their neighborhood was a "good to excellent" place to live.

The figures were made available in a joint study released by the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development and the Census Bureau.

Although most families, regardless of financial status, rated their neighborhood "good to excellent," the study concluded that the more a family earned the more likely it was to give its neighborhood a favorable ranking.

The survey found that 89 per cent of the middle-to-high income families — those with annual earnings over $15,000 — rated their neighborhood good to excellent.

Of the nation's low-to-middle income households — those earning between $5,000 to $14,999 per year — 79 per cent gave their community a high rating.

On the other hand, of those households making less than $5,000 a year, only 74 per cent gave their communities the favorable ranking.

Despite the high marks for neighborhoods, a large number of families complained about local nuisances. Noise, heavy traffic, inadequate street lighting and crime ranked highest on the complaint list.

Nonetheless, less than 2 per cent of those questioned said these negative conditions warranted a move.

Brokers bring higher prices for houses

Mr. Meltzer on real estate

by Bernard Meltzer

DEAR MR. MELTZER: My father has been in his grave less than two weeks — and my brothers and sister are already fighting over his estate. There are four of us, and the only asset of value is the house in which we all were raised.

The only interest my brothers and sister have is money. We're now fighting over the manner in which the house is to be sold. I feel that we could get more money if we put up the house for auction. The only thing we can agree on is to ask your advice. —ASHAMED OF MY RELATIVES.

Your family needs much more than real estate guidance. But since the matter of money is their prime interest, I will limit my advice to that.

A typical house usually brings a higher price in a private sale negotiated by a broker. I say this because of my long years of observation of the real estate market.

A broker performs such services as securing proper financing, matching the buyer with the parcel of real estate and assisting in the involved negotiations and technicalities which are part of every transaction.

An auction sale should be considered for an unusual property or when legal requirements indicate its use. But for the typical house, a seller can usually obtain a better price in a private sale.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: My husband and I would like to know what our next-door neighbor paid for his house. But we are embarrassed to ask him, since some people are funny about things like that.

Is there another way we can learn what we want to know? —MRS. NOSEY-BUGS.

Information of this nature can be obtained from the public record — even for a "Nosey-Bugs."

Go to the county office where deeds are recorded. A copy of record of your neighbor's deed will give you the information you desire — what he paid for his property.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: I have a "toughie" for you. My guess is that you will not have the fortitude to answer this question. It's about lumber.

Our architect has drawn up a beautiful set of plans and specifications. He calls for No. 1 clear lumber.

We are about to sign a contract. The other day I ran into one of the carpenters who will work on the house if we sign. "Mrs. . . . . ," he said, "you are being taken. There is no need to use No. 1 clear lumber No. 2 common is good enough."

When I suggested the change, both the architect and the builder said no. The architect has a national reputation and the builder has been working in this area for over 30 years. The change means a saving of $4,000. —WHAT SAY YOU?

It doesn't take much fortitude to answer this question, in spite of possible howls that may come from lumber dealers and architects (famous or not). I say use the lower grade lumber. It is suitable for this purpose. No. 2 common lumber has adequate structural strength for house framing.

I would use the better grade lumber only for places where it is necessary for decorative purposes.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: When I signed a contract recently for new siding on my house, the salesman said his company was offering a "lifetime guarantee."

How long a period of time does this kind of guarantee cover? Whose lifetime are they referring to? When I tried to call the salesman for an explanation, I was told that the telephone had been disconnected. —CONFUSED.

In this case, your "lifetime guarantee" covers the short period between the time you signed the contract and the time the note was discounted at the bank — probably 24 hours.

A guarantee is only as good as the company behind it. If you check with your local Better Business Bureau, I'm sure you'll find that the "lifetime" of the company has already expired.

Home seekers flock to cities

A big comeback for American cities?

Yes — and emphatically so in key population-growth centers around the country.

Major cities, in the latter part of this decade, will experience a significant popularity surge sparked by urban-oriented young home seekers, reports Esmark Inc., Chicago, a diversified company with interests in real estate.

According to Esmark, increasing numbers of young Americans ages 24 through 39 are expressing a desire to live and work in their region's metropolitan centers.

Some recent study highlights reveal:

• Heavy agricultural areas in states throughout the Midwest and South are contributing young adults to the heartland and southern capital cities at a "loss rate" of 39 per cent per year. This figure has increased at a rate of 4 per cent per year since 1970.

• Additionally, two-thirds of the homeowning, city-living 24-39-year-olds have moved to their dwellings from ex-urban locations within the last five years. In 1970, only 44 per cent of this age group had recently moved to cities from rural homes.

• The majority of respondents between the ages of 24 and 39 expressed contentment with cities in the half million to one million population range — whether in such coastal locales as Boston, Baltimore, San Francisco, Los Angeles and New Orleans or in central U.S. cities such as Chicago, Cincinnati, Detroit, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Louis and Kansas City.

• Cities in the nation's southern tier — Atlanta, Birmingham, Dallas, Tampa-St. Petersburg, Houston, Phoenix, Albuquerque, San Diego, Jacksonville and Savannah — are attracting young re-locaters not only from their respective states but from all over the nation.

• Matching the pull of the southern tier cities are the environmentally-appealing metropolises — Denver, Salt Lake City, Seattle, Santa Monica, Portland, Vancouver, Las Vegas, the Miami-Ft. Lauderdale hub, Mobile and Cheyenne.

• A smaller percentage of this age group preferred slightly smaller cities like Pittsburgh, Nashville, Louisville, Raleigh, Richmond, Santa Fe, Tucson, Des Moines, Omaha and Hartford.

• In all cases, those questioned indicated that they would remain in the cities named for at least the next five years.

Relocation unit reports sales boost

Inter-Community Relocation, Inc. (ICR), a five-year old national real estate relocation referral organization of which Baird & Warner, Inc. is a charter member, reported a $21 million dollar or 27.3 per cent increase in 1975 over 1974 residential sales.

The increase for the Kansas City based network of leading real estate companies was achieved on a sales volume of $97 million in referral relocation sites.

Baird & Warner, Inc., with 31 offices in Chicago and surrounding suburbs, is ICR's exclusive representative in helping people transfering to and from the Chicago metropolitan area. Baird & Warner led the national organization in referrals in 1975.

Robert G. Walters, senior vice president and general manager of Baird & Warner's residential sales division, disclosed that ICR's unit sales also increased 21.8 per cent.

Officials of ICR are projecting an increase in 1976 relocation sales of at least $120 million, or 25 per cent.

"Even though the market for existing home sales was excellent in most parts of the country in 1975, corporate relocations were still somewhat subdued because of economic conditions. Once it appears that we are in for a relatively long period of economic expansion it is reasonable to expect that employe transfers will increase and increase relocation sales for the excellent organizations that constitute ICR," said Walters, who is serving as president this year.

Midwest hardest hit by tornadoes

Winter snows give way to spring storms — and the Insurance Information Institute says that Midwesterners should be aware of the horrendous devastation caused by nature's deadliest of all storms — the tornado.

Tornados struck many Midwest states this March, traditionally the beginning of the tornado season. And in a study commissioned by the Atomic Energy Commission, Dr. T. Theodore Fujita of the University of Chicago reports that the Midwest states, from Nebraska to Ohio to Kentucky, have been the hardest hit by tornados in the last decade.

A tornado is a quarter-mile wide, mile-high black whirlwind moving along at 30 miles per hour, virtually destroying everything in its path. In the last several years twisters have killed hundreds of persons and destroyed billions of dollars worth of property.

In the years 1964-74, tornados have killed hundreds in the Midwest, including: Indiana - 600, Ohio - 589, Kentucky - 553, Iowa - 402, Minnesota - 293, Wisconsin - 278, Illinois - 257 and Michigan - 201.

In order to minimize the loss of lives and property damage, the institute urges Midwesterners to prepare now and keep informed about what to do before, during and after a storm.

Keep in mind that inflation is increasing the cost of home repair and replacement, so review your insurance coverage with your insurance representative to make certain you will be adequately compensated in the event of a storm loss.

Be sure and keep important papers, including insurance policies, titles, wills and other records in a safe place where they are not likely to be damaged by water, wind, or fire, but where they can be easily retrieved. Also, keep an up-to-date inventory of possessions, complete with photos of your property. This will aid you and your representative in determining your losses after a storm hits.

Also, keep a first-aid kit, a flashlight, a portable radio and extra batteries handy. Then you will have them when you need them most — during and after a tornado.

If you live in a mobile home, the institute recommends securing it with anchors or tie-downs and positioning them to take advantage of natural windbreaks such as trees and hills. Even then, mobile home residents should seek more secure shelter in the event of a tornado, as a twister can quickly turn such a home into a mangled mass of steel and wood in seconds.

When storm conditions develop, keep alert to radio and television weather advisories and plan your work and play schedules accordingly. Remember — a tornado watch is issued when conditions are favorable for a tornado to develop. A tornado warning means a twister has been sighted.

If a tornado is sighted in your area, move to a place of safety immediately — the basement is the safest place if you have one. If you do not have a basement, move to the center and lowest floor of your home or apartment where outside walls offer maximum protection, making certain to stay low, preferably under a piece of heavy furniture, and away from windows.

After a storm, be careful. Avoid loose electrical lines and stay away from badly damaged buildings that could topple over. Keep tuned to your radio for any instructions from community officials.

Avoid using the telephone. Phone lines will be disabled or tied up with emergency calls.

If your home or business has been severely damaged, turn off gas and electricity at the point these utilities enter the building. This will reduce the hazard of fire.

You should inspect your property as quickly as is practical and report any damage to your insurance representative as soon as possible. Also make any temporary repairs that will prevent further damage to your property, such as covering holes in the roof or walls with plastic or other temporary siding. And keep the receipts, since these costs are normally covered by your home insurance policy.

If you are forced to move to temporary quarters, such as a motel, this cost is usually covered by your insurance. Be sure to leave word with neighbors and your insurance representative as to where you can be reached.

Following major storms the insurance industry mobilizes adjusters from throughout the country, says the I.I.I., sending them to the stricken area to expedite the handling of claims. Larger, more serious losses are given priority.

In addition to insurance personnel, government and private relief agency officials, there will be other groups on the scene of a disaster. Looters, fly-by-night contractors, bogus "adjusters," instant "tree surgeons" and a variety of others will attempt to take advantage of storm victims, especially if the resident has just received a check from the insurance company.

Unsolicited offers of assistance from other than bona fide relief agencies should be regarded with suspicion. A call to the disaster center, which is set up after a tornado, is wise before conducting business with over-eager strangers. Also watch for out-of-state license plates on trucks or cars in the stricken area and report suspicious activity to the police.

Tornados often strike with little warning. Knowing what to do before and after a storm can save not only time and property, but also lives.

Red Carpet opens office

Red Carpet Corp. of America has opened a Midwest regional office and is now accepting Illinois real estate brokers as members of the franchise organization.

The office in Elmhurst is headed by Frank G. Larkin, Midwest regional manager. Red Carpet, organized in 1966 in California, consists of 800 affiliated brokers from coast to coast.

All of Red Carpet's marketing services are available to participating brokers. Following purchase of a franchise, the broker is charged a monthly fee which is a percentage of that office's business. According to Larkin, this fee entitles him to a continuing program of Red Carpet services including:

- A professional real estate management course for brokers that deals with elements such as office procedures, cost control, personnel relations, and improved working relationships with fellow realtors.
- Real estate sales training courses, including a program of 18 video-tape workshop sessions coordinated under a training director.
- Local advertising under the Red Carpet name.
- A nationwide home referral service under the Red Carpet Corp. name.

The franchise includes an agreement that requires the broker to follow ethical standards and other requirements for good business practice in force in his community.

More families are drawn to recreation communities

Increasing numbers of families, in every part of the country, are looking into ROCs, recreationally-oriented communities, as a first dwelling choice.

So reports Esmark, Inc., Chicago, a diversified company with interests in real estate.

Home seekers, according to Esmark, are now focusing on "total environment" concepts when selecting a house.

Built-in sports, cultural and shopping advantages, such as those supplied by ROCs, are, therefore, big "plusses" on a prospective buyer's priority list.

ROCs, not only contain many of the leisure-time facilities most families desire but also offer special, maintenance-free community-living advantages important to the year-round — as well as the vacation-time — resident.

Some of the amenities available to residents of recreationally oriented communities include:

• Swimming, boating, tennis and golf — most popular in more moderate climates.

• Access to game, social and meeting rooms which are established as a part of the ROC community. There are also auditoriums for amateur and professional performing arts, lectures and other group entertainment activities.

• On-site shopping and restaurant facilities which enable residents to accomplish practical and pleasurable duties without leaving the area.

Most ROCs are the result of careful planning — providing balanced open space around building centers — with acreage set aside for biking, hiking and other pleasure-time pursuits.

Many buyers report that their second home purchase will be a future retirement haven. For these individuals, the present extra dwelling will one day be a first home. The current in-town site will become income-producing rental property or simply be sold outright.

Esmark predicts ROC shoppers will swell in number in 1976 — bringing a variety of interests and economic backgrounds to recreationally oriented communities.

Decline noted in FHA loans

For many years FHA insurance has enabled homebuyers to obtain mortgage financing with minimum downpayments at low interest rates. The cost of financing with an FHA mortgage has been near or below the cost of conventional loans that typically have much higher downpayments.

FHA borrowers paid interest rates roughly comparable to those paid by borrowers using conventional mortgages from 1965 to 1975. During this period, FHA downpayments ranged from 5 per cent to 10 per cent, but conventional borrowers made downpayments of 25 per cent of the value of the house (on average). In dollar terms the average unsubsidized FHA borrower made a downpayment of $2,726 while the average conventional borrower paid $11,000 down or four times as much during the first quarter of 1975.

FHA has particular importance for the family buying its first house or for anyone with limited cash. Without FHA insurance, many such families would have to pay higher interest rates and would have difficulty obtaining loans with minimal downpayments. During periods of tight money, FHA financing is especially important for families able to make only a small downpayment.

FHA loans are exempt from usury laws in most states and have not suffered from the low ceilings on conventional mortgage rates. When money is scarce many lenders limit their conventional lending programs by requiring potential borrowers to be depositors in their institution, or to make very large downpayments.

Some lenders, faced with a lack of funds and low usury ceilings, may halt activity entirely. An FHA loan may become the only one available to many families not eligible for VA loans in such a tight money situation, since only goverment-involved loans have yields high enough to compete for funds.

The decline in FHA insuring volume shows that during recent tight money periods when low downpayment conventional loans were not available fewer people were able to find such financing at reasonable cost. Mortgage rates have risen during the past ten years, reflecting the strong inflationary pressures present in the economy.

Expansion of warranty program urged

A HUD-FHA task force is looking into the Federal Housing Administration to revitalize it and move it "out in front, playing a leadership role, and providing support and assistance where the need is greatest." Its report is due in about three months.

Robert T. Wallace, deputy under secretary of management for HUD, who heads the task force, told the legislative committee of the National Association of Realtors meeting in their annual legislative conference, the association should continue to push for home warranty programs in the private sector.

"HUD will be glad to help you wherever we can," he said. "The warranty program should be extended everywhere within the private sector. I urge you to work with others in the housing industry to expand the warranty protection."

"FHA will continue to be involved in housing," Wallace said. "We are reviewing FHA to see what must be done to reconstitute it. We want to play a greater role in problem solving in the total community environment and not just in the area of single family residences."

Some critics are saying "go back to the good old days" when FHA basically served a moderate to middle income market, he said. Others say "FHA should be dissolved." The task force is asking if FHA should continue service to the middle income, often younger market, he said. It is exploring a new "complimentary role" where FHA joins with conventional lenders to share the risk of mortgage insurance.

He reminded the Realtors that the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 has a program under way to test this "complimentary role" concept in two target cities.

The housing needs for lower income families will have to be satisfied through multifamily construction and the judicious use of existing and rehabilitated units, he said. An additional financial guarantee such as mortgage insurance is needed to induce new construction or substantial rehabilitation to provide this housing. The tough problem to be solved in such a guarantee is that of the nature of the insurance and the size of the premium.

Love Controls buys plant site

Love Controls Corp., 1714 S. Wolf Rd., Wheeling, a leading manufacturer of industrial temperature controls, has purchased a 122,000 sq. ft. (3 acre) plant site in the Palatine Expressway Industrial Park in Wheeling. Construction of a 30,000 to 50,000 sq. ft. plant should begin in 12 to 24 months.

Having expanded three times in the last five years, they now occupy approximately 15,000 sq. ft. of space at their present location in an incubator type industrial building constructed a little over five years ago.

Love Controls Corp. was founded in November, 1970. Their first control was introduced to the market in May, 1971. At the present their line consists of 54 models and more than 160 optional features.

By the time they are settled into their new factory, sales will have grown from their present $2 million area to $3 to $5 million.

Real estate class scheduled April 28

An advanced real estate listing/sales workshop sponsored by The Chicago Real Estate Board will be offered in the Chicago area starting April 28.

For real estate salesmen only, the workshop will meet from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. on four consecutive Wednesdays at the Sheraton Oak Lawn, 9333 South Cicero, Oak Lawn. Tuition for the entire program is $135, which includes all course texts and materials, as well as refreshments and lunch each day. Registration may be obtained by contacting Marlene Goldberg at the CREB office, 18 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago 60603.

The workshop is being sponsored by the Chicago Real Estate Board/Hall Institute Real Estate School. It will demand active student participation through role playing, team problem solving and case studies.

Experience with the workshop in other cities around the nation has shown a marked improvement in real estate listing and sales among workshop graduates.

building/development

by GEORGE E. CREED

At this time of year, advertisements appear in newspapers and magazines for all sorts of trees, shrubs and flowers. Most of these ads describe their offerings in a straightforward way, but a few make exaggerated claims and illustrate them with highly colored and sometimes misleading drawings. Often these are mail-order nursery sales firms that do not grow the plants but simply merchandise them.

In some advertisements the tree of heaven (Ailanthus), black locust, Chinese elm, poplar and silver maple are praised highly. None of these has a place in your landscape unless you can't grow anything else. All are fast-growing and will grow under the most adverse circumstances. But they have many faults, and you can find several other trees that are more desirable.

Some mail-order firms advertise trees and shrubs that have great merit as ornamentals, but their claims are often outlandish. And the illustrations of them are equally so — generally resembling those shown here.

Sketch A is advertised by one firm as a snowball shrub. No other name is given and since there are several shrubs that are commonly known as snowball shrubs, you really have no idea as to the correct identity of this plant.

The tree in sketch B is a fanciful drawing of a very fine tree commonly called sorrel tree or sourwood (Oxydendrum arboreum). Imaginative advertising men have given it the name of "Lily of the Valley" tree, presumably because its flowers somewhat resemble those of lily of the valley. But judging from the drawing you might conclude that the tree was literally laden down with sweet-smelling flowers. The blossoms of the sorrel tree are not fragrant, nor are they borne in the great abundance you might be led to expect from the illustration.

It's your landscape

It is a fact that tulip trees do have blossoms that resemble tulips, but they do not appear on a tree in the exaggerated way shown in Sketch C — the kind of illustration used in some advertising. Because the flowers of the tulip tree appear after the leaves have developed, they are not readily apparent. This tree has much going for it but don't expect it to look like the one in the sketch.

Chinese lilac (d) is a tall shrub (15 feet) that is valuable as an ornamental because of its purplish flowers, but they do not bloom in the profusion as is shown here.

The best policy in purchasing plants of any kind is to buy them locally from a good nursery. If you must rely on mail orders, make sure you know what you are getting and look with a critical eye at the highly colored pictures of plants and exaggerated claims for them.

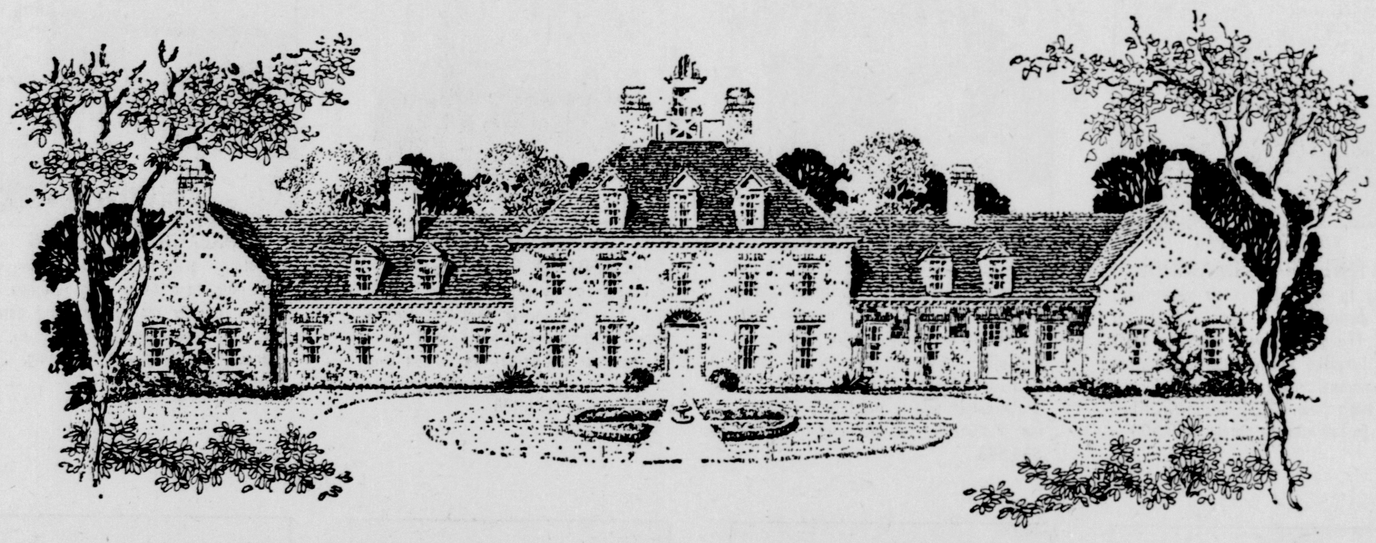
Oswald and James Jacoby will help you hold a winning hand in "WIN AT BRIDGE", appearing daily in the HERALD.



Early Georgian Grace in the American Colonies . . .

On an evening in 1776, the Declaration of Independence was introduced to an enthusiastic Continental Congress. Great as the moment must have been, no one could possibly have recognized its full importance in world politics, or the young nation's future as the leader of the world; furthermore, that this could be made possible by the determination of hard-working and resourceful people, spurred by America's brilliant minds and by many unsung heroes.

Although the house pictured is inspired by the English manor houses, it has a character of its own that is typical of houses built on the eastern seaboard some two centuries ago in the early days of the young and vigorous republic. It can be built for you this year, and may even be constructed in stages as your family or your needs grow. As shown above it will have sixteen rooms and six fireplaces. Though of a historic design, the house will still provide the most modern conveniences, including an electrically operated dumbwaiter to serve the upper floors. In addition there will be large utility areas and space for parking four automobiles and garden machinery.

Among the elaborate interior finishing will be raised walnut paneling and carved woodwork in the Library and many other special details, such as the graceful main stairway, plus auxiliary stairways. The many interesting rooms and the exceptional nature of the overall plan will provide an outstanding setting for gala entertainment and quiet evenings by the fireside. The estimated cost of building this house is $300,000 excluding land.

TO THE RIGHT we have shown Phase One of this house. Here, the number of rooms and fireplaces have been reduced, and some of the special features have been omitted. However, the finishing standard will surpass that of other houses on the market costing considerably more. The price, excluding land, is $140,000

Of special interest: the plans can be expanded to include the rooms and dimensions of the larger house described above, and this can be achieved without expensive alterations or removal of work already completed. You are thus assured of an excellent expansion program as an additional benefit of your basic investment.

If you are planning to invest in a residence reflecting special individuality, together with superior design and construction, we invite you to call us so that we may arrange time for a preliminary discussion. We will also be happy to invite you to tour one of the residences we have built, with the proud owners' consent.

From colds to cancer

The family physician specializes in people

by ELEANOR RIVES

Suppose you had a sore throat, difficulty breathing and unexplained chest pain, would you go to:

- An ear-nose-throat specialist?
- A cardiac specialist?
- A pulmonary disease specialist?
- A hospital emergency room?
- None of these?

If you answered "none of these," you may be one of the millions of people who still long for the personal care of the old type family doctor and who has found the modern version of that prototype in today's "family practice physician."

Family practice was designated the 20th medical specialty by the American Medical Association in 1969. It is medicine's answer to the impressive but bewildering array of choices —sometimes even self-diagnosis — a patient must make when he is ill.

THE FAMILY PHYSICIAN is as much a specialist as the surgeon, the pediatrician or the gynecologist. He does not focus on a gallbladder, a stomach, a throat. He concentrates on the whole person and that person's relationship to his family and his environment. He gives preventive, comprehensive continuing care to the entire family.

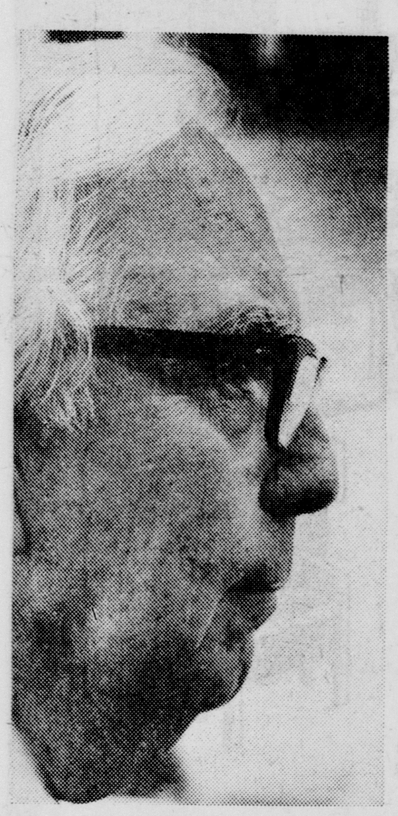
The family physician is a "primary care" specialist, a patient's first point of contact when he is ill. According to the American Academy of Family Physicians, he is able to handle 90 to 95 per cent of all patient problems. The other five per cent he refers to other specialists, but continues as the patient's advocate until the patient is returned to his care.

As one family physician put it, "We treat health problems as varied as colds and cancer and we follow our patients from the womb to the tomb."

TO BECOME A family practice specialist, a medical student must complete a three-year residency program and pass a stringent two-day certifying examination. A great part of his residency training takes place in a "model practice unit" within a teaching hospital or medical center, a unit designed to resemble a doctor's private office as much as possible. At this home base, the resident doctor is assigned entire families to treat for three years.

One such family practice center is at Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge, one of 20 approved residency programs in this field in the state of Illinois. There, 13 resident doctors under the supervision of Dr. Philip Heller, chairman of the Division of Family Practice, take care of approximately 1,500 families.

DR. LAURA DeLAPP, in her third year of residency, once interested in internal medicine, turned to family practice because she thought it offered greater variety and the opportunity to see the whole family picture. "You don't just look at a sore throat," she said. "You ask, "How's your Mom? How are things going in school?' You get to know these people and their families intimately."



"A SPECIALIST in family practice should be well qualified in internal medicine, pediatrics, minor surgery, trauma and emergency care and normal obstetrics and gynecology. He should be well-versed in . . . psychology." —Dr. Philip Heller.

Dr. LeLapp spends four hours a day in the Family Practice Center where she sees from four to 25 patients a day. When family therapy is indicated, she sets aside additional time, sometimes bringing in a family therapist. "Only a small percentage of my patients are undergoing family therapy," she said. "But almost all of them get individual therapy, most of it from me."

WHEN DR. DeLAPP finishes her residency in July, she intends to practice medicine in the same geographical area. Dr. Heller pointed out that 60 per cent of resident doctors practice within 60 miles of the hospital where they complete their residency.

Dr. DeLapp replied lightly but with obvious sincerity that she wasn't going to get too far away from a man with the years of experience of Dr. Heller, someone to turn to with questions that do not have their answers in books.

The program at Lutheran General began with only three family practice residents in July 1973. As of July 1976, there will be 17. In addition there are about 30 active family physicians on the hospital staff.

FAMILY PRACTICE has experienced explosive growth since the creation of a certifying board in family medicine in 1969. Prior to this the percentage of doctors in general practice had dwindled from 75 per cent in 1931 to 16 per cent in 1970. In 1969, there were only 30 family practice residency programs in the United States; today there are approximately 278. Since 1970, more than 8,788 family physicians have passed the two-day written examination to be board-certified.

Many family physicians were already practicing doctors who decided to specialize in family practice. Not all elected to take the certification exams — as Dr. Heller did — but all were required to meet continuing education requirements in order to be members of the American Academy of Family Physicians.

BY 1978, certification exams may be taken only by those who complete a three-year family practice residency. To maintain certification, all board-certified family physicians must be retested and recertified every six years.

"The restrictions for approving new family practice residency programs by accrediting agencies are also very stringent," explained Dr. Heller. "Mediocre won't do. They must be excellent."

Last year, with seven residency slots open at Lutheran General Hospital, Dr. Heller interviewed 45 applians chosen from 200 letters of application. This year between 200 and 300 letters have been received and 35 will be interviewed for the six slots available.

NATIONWIDE, IN JULY of 1970 there were 290 residency positions available in the United States, compared with 3,720 in July 1975, according to Dr. Harry Marchmont-Robinson, executive director of the Illinois Academy of Family Physicians. In Illinois alone, there were five residency slots in July 1970 compared to 245 in July 1975.

"And for the present year," said Dr. Marchmont-Robinson, "it appears that although the number of slots has again increased, all residencies have been filled."

Dr. Heller attributes some of the popularity of this medical specialty to two factors: 1. Young people in medical school, many of whom experienced the social unrest of the '60s, want to relate to people as people — not to systems, material things or computers, and 2. There's a certain nostalgia to the old-time family doctor, even though those days are over.

"THE AMA FORECASTS that 50 per cent of the 1976 medical graduating classes will go into one of the primary care specialties," said Dr. Heller, explaining that this encompasses family practice, general pediatrics, internal medicine and obstetrics-gynecology. "These must exist side by side until the public decides who is to be the primary physician — or whether all four will just continue to exist side by side.

"I personally believe family practice should be the primary care specialty," he added.

"WHY AM I SPECIALIZING in family practice? Because it is the epitome of human ecology. We treat all members of the family in light of their relationships to the environment and to each other. We get to know these people intimately. I call it 'family ecology'." —Dr. Laura DeLapp.

Where women rank in family practice

In the United States today, between 13 and 15 per cent of all medical students are women, estimates Dr. Philip Heller, chairman of the Department of Family Practice at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge.

The American Academy of Family Physicians, Kansas City, Mo., reports that the percentage of family practice residency positions held by women has increased from 7.9 per cent in 1974 to 8.3 per cent in 1975.

Of the 2,651 family practice residency positions in 1974, 212 were held by women. Of the 3,720 family practice residency positions in 1975, 309 were women.

AT LUTHERAN GENERAL Hospital, the only northwest suburban hospital with a family practice residency program, one of the 13 residents in the family practice center is a woman. When she finishes her residence in July, another woman will enter the program. Of the hospital's 30 staff members in the Division of Family Practice, two are women.

At Holy Family Hopsital in Des Plaines where Dr. Charles A. Schell is chairman of the Family Practice Section, one woman is included on the staff of 27 family practice physicians.

Alexian Brothers Medical Center reports that there are 30 family practice physicians, one of whom is a woman. Dr. Ronald Schmutzer heads the department.

At Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, Dr. Alan Hollett heads the Department of Family Practice, with 25 members on his staff. All of them are men.

What you always wanted to know . . . and asked

In an interview at Northwest Community Hospital, Dr. Jerome Walker, a family practice staff member, and Dr. Alan Hollett, chairman of the hospital's Department of Family Practice, candidly answered some frequently asked questions.

What is the role of the family practice specialist in medical care today?

DR. HOLLETT: Let's face it, some patients who come into the doctor's office are going to get better with or without treatment. But every person needs someone he can go to first with a problem. He shouldn't run from specialist to specialist, or dash off to the emergency room.

DR. WALKER: When a patient has vague problems — like head, back, abdominal pain — the emergency room may rule out any serious illness or injury, but it's the family physician who must make the diagnosis.

Take a patient, a woman, complaining of backache. An orthopedist might tell her nothing is wrong. But it could be caused by a pelvic cyst which would be discovered by a gynecologist. A family practice physician would check all these things.

DR. HOLLETT: In past years as medicine became more and more sophisticated, the specialist stepped in. People thought they would get better care from a specialist. Now they are swinging back to the general doctor.

Specialization has gotten out of hand. A man trained in a very narrow field, hematology for example, may have such a limited number of patients that he ends up doing general medicine or family practice. In England most of the doctors are family physicians.

DR. WALKER: Everyone needs a family practice physician or an internist, pediatrician and obstetrician-gynecologist. The internist is a primary care physician, but limits his practice to adults. Maybe 50 per cent of family practice is pediatrics, including adolescents.

Do primary care physicians, such as yourselves, make house calls any more?

DR. WALKER: Very seldom. You can't do as much for someone at home as you can in your own office. If a patient is that sick, he may need the paramedics or the emergency room. If it's an emergency, he will probably end up in the hospital anyhow.

So house calls are limited largely to shut-ins, mostly very elderly people who can't leave the house. And doctors now see a great percentage of these in nursing homes.

DR. HOLLETT: A doctor can see four or five children in his office in the time it takes for one house call. The average doctor today sees 30 to 40 people a day. In the past he saw eight to 10 with perhaps eight being house

Betty Ford loves the designs of Albert Capraro

by ELLIE GROSSMAN

(Second in a series)

They're all here for designer Albert Capraro's summer showing.

The hard-faced ladies in massive minks, 18 carat bangles and leather boots so supple they must have been gummed by ancient Eskimo women.

And the winsome young men with thick hair and secrets in their eyes as they smile and wave at each other.

Endlessly, New York's fashion set spills into the Fashion Institute of Technology's auditorium.

It's an airy, modified amphitheater — tier upon tier of gray carpeted stairs facing a large stage. Hard on the back, but impressive.

WHILE TAPED disco music pounds the hearing into gruel, one of Capparo's partners seats the more important spectators. Tall and maitre d'ish in a black suit, he says in passing, "No, the White House couldn't come, but they sent flowers."

..And there you have the reason for the hoopla.

A year ago, Betty Ford saw a feature on Albert Capraro in a local Washington paper and called him to design for her. Up he flew to a royal box on Olympus.

His summer showing, fittingly, verges on a Gower Champion production. Lights down, lights up, music blaring, models cavorting. Group after group in his line is greeted with rolls of applause: yellow and white striped beachwear; sophisticated white, pencil-skirted suits; flowing black eveningwear.

CAPRARO, CLEARLY, is a designer to talk to. But. There's no rapid transit system to Olympus.

Three times the interview is canceled and rescheduled. Albert, poor dear, has the flu. Albert is rushing off for an out-of-town showing and must rest. Albert is going on vacation, but, perhaps, this week.

Finally, late one afternoon, his gray, plump secretary makes welcome sounds in his busy showroom on Seventh Avenue. Nevertheless . . .

"We'll have to cut it to half an hour, dear, because Albert has the flu, you know. And he has another interview with a Japanese reporter and Polly Bergen is in with him now. But you can get what you need. Albert is very fast."

CAPRARO BOUNCES into the showroom, a short, round man with black curly hair, mustache and goatee. His flu, evidently, is an exotic and uncharted strain. He's a bit breathless, but his brown eyes are unglazed, his step unwavering.

He does speak rapidly but amiably. "I'm 32," he says with a woeful smile, "and I've had my own business for two years. Before that I worked for Oscar de la Renta for eight years, and Lily Dache before that.

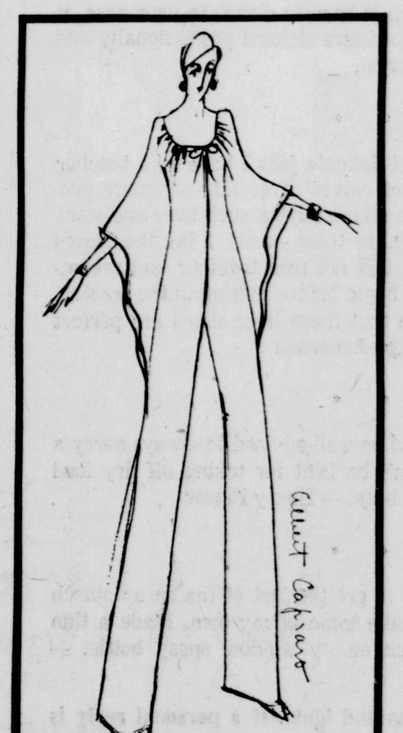
"When Mrs. Ford's assistant called, I could hardly speak on the phone. Mrs. Ford loved my philosophy of very romantic and feminine clothes at a price. My clothes are under $200. I didn't understand at first that they wanted me to come to the White House. I thought they'd send me fabric which the President had brought back from his trips."

THE FIRST LADY, he says, usually buys directly from his collections. "The only exclusive things I do for her are for a State dinner or something like that. She wore my flannel jumpsuit in Alaska and all her clothes on her trip to China were mine. For evening, she likes a rather covered look, but I've done some plunging backs to a modest point."

Polly Bergen approaches to say goodbye. She kisses him on the cheek — "I'll call you" — and leaves, a chic woman in black trenchcoat and boots.

He apologizes for the interruption. "Come, I want to show you my workroom."

We move past display racks, buyers and sales personnel into the factory and on to a cluttered room with two desks, his secretary at one, a male assistant at the other. There, on the wall, are color photos of Capraro with the First Lady, dancing, talking.



COTTON JERSEY batwing jumpsuit was sketched for NEA by Albert Capraro as a summer wearing treat, in black or red.

"I was invited to a State dinner for the German president," he explains.

"WHAT HAPPENS to me when Mrs. Ford leaves the White House? I don't think it will affect me. I'm building a reputation as a designer and the Fords brought me into the light. It's just like her to bring in someone unknown to do her clothes. We've become personal friends and no one will ever be able to take that away from me."

She's a size six, he says, "no more than 106 pounds, 5 feet 5½ and she has hazel eyes that change with the fabric, which I find extraordinary. She can wear many colors — royal blue, beige, prints."

We're back in the showroom now and the gray secretary appears with a smiling, diffident young Japanese.

So sorry to have to stop now. So nice meeting you. Capraro shakes hands and leads the silent, smiling Japanese off.

"I'm building to be one of the top designers in the country," he said at one point.

Goodbye, Albert, and keep up the good work.

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Cholesterol level tends to fluctuate

I visited a doctor last spring whom I'll call Dr. A. He found my cholesterol too high. He told me to be careful of my milk, meat and egg intake. Since then I have visited Dr. B, who says it has leveled off. If I eat these products, will it come back? Dr. A found a high blood pressure condition. He doesn't believe in a salt free diet. Dr. B says watch your salt intake. What do you say? Dr. B says I have sugar diabetes. He is trying to control it with a diabetic diet. Does this mean I can never eat sweets? I would appreciate your opinion since neither doctor will give me satisfaction on these questions.

Medicine is not an exact science. The body is not a precise machine and varies from time to time. The combination of these often results in different medical opinions. The cholesterol level tends to fluctuate, particularly in some people.

During the time a person is losing weight, cholesterol may fall sharply. As soon as the weight is stabilized even at a lower level, the cholesterol may then rise again. I can readily see where you might have gone to Dr. A when your cholesterol was high and when you visited Dr. B, if you have been restricting your diet and were in the process of losing weight, that your level might be low. If that were true and that were the cause, certainly if you abandoned your dietary program, you'd have a good likelihood of again having a high cholesterol level.

The way to keep the cholesterol level down is to lose weight, change your diet to avoid high-cholesterol, high-fat foods and persist in a diet that avoids these foods thereafter. If you return to your previous habits that were associated with a high cholesterol level, the likelihood is the high cholesterol will return to.

For more information on diet in controlling cholesterol send 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 1-3, Diet, Preventing Atherosclerosis. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

DOCTORS USED to be very big on limiting salt in people who had high blood pressure. Because new medicines are available that help to eliminate sodium, not all doctors are as strict about limiting salt as they used to be. I still think it's a good idea to limit salt if you have a tendency toward high blood pressure. All doctors agree in limiting salt if the patient has swelling, heart failure or other manifestations of accumulating fluid.

Your doctor obviously thinks you have a very mild form of diabetes, and that is why he is trying to control it with diet. If you cooperate, he will probably be successful. If the problem is being overweight, once your weight is adequately reduced you might be able to eat some sweets part of the time. The big problem with sweets for a person with even mild diabetes is that they contain a lot of calories. That makes it difficult to control obesity. They are also rapidly absorbed into the blood stream and make it a little more difficult to control the diabetic.

This does not mean that a diabetic should not have carbohydrates but rather that large amounts of concentrated sweets should be avoided because of their calorie intake and, in the diabetic who is taking insulin, the difficulty this creates in smoothing out the blood sugar level throughout the 24-hour period.

Professional cleaning suggested for velvet

Dear Dorothy: I have two rust-colored velvet chairs that need attention. Our 13-month-old son left the remains of crushed cookie crumbs that have dried into light crusty spots on the seat cushions and arm rests. What type of solution do I use to clean these spots? — Mrs. Robert Gardens

You can brush off the crusty stains and try one of the cleaners recommended for velvet, rayon or acetate. I'd gather that you did not have these chairs coated with a stain-repellent. This is a good idea for any upholstery (provided the material is color-fast) and especially so for velvt, which is hard to clean. In your case, it might be a good idea to have the chairs cleaned professionally and then have a protective coating put on.

Dear Dorothy: One of the most delicate jobs I have as a butcher is cutting the paper-thin slices of calves' liver that so many people like. Some customers will see others buying such liver and want some themselves — for freezing. In these cases, I lay the pieces flat on vegetable paper so they will not fuse together and recommend that they be foil-sealed at home before putting in the freezer. The reports that come back are that these liver slices are perfect as much as a month later. — Ralph Arberann

There's method to enriching soil

by Mary B. Good

A team of wild horses won't stop Allen J's gardening enthusiasm this year. He's expecting his tomato plants to bolt right out of the ground like a dynamite blast because he's using a manure hotbed to get off to a galloping start.

Don't laugh! Allen spent about a month preparing his soil with a variety of organic additives last spring. When harvest came, he picked dozens of large tomatoes from each of his five-foot high plants and enough peppers to satisfy even the likes of Peter Piper.

When his soil was tested this spring, the nitrogen content skyrocketed beyond that of any other garden in the community plot. (Soil testing is the first step to good vegetable gardening.)

BUT ALLEN isn't sitting on last year's laurels. Working even harder this year to get an early start, he filled his Bronco with fresh horse manure from a farmer and added one third straw. He made a pile three feet high with his manure straw mix and it started heating up.

After three or four days he turned the mixture so the outside of the pile was inside the pile. As the heat built up, he waited six more days and then shoveled the pile into a two-feet deep trench row he had excavated.

Allen tamped the mix down six inches at a time to obtain uniform heat and prevent excessive settling, and he moistened. it. After he used all the manure, he placed six inches of soil on top, filling the trench so it looked like any other row of plowed soil ready for spring planting.

IF YOU'RE A vegetable gardener considering a manure hotbed this year, you'll need a soil thermometer because planting must be delayed until the temperature of the soil drops to 85 degrees or less. (The heat generated in a manure hotbed often reaches 140 degrees or more.)

If seeds are planted when the bed is first made without waiting for a short time for the temperature of the fermenting organics to drop, the high temperature could very likely kill the seeds or severely injure them.

Just a note on using the manure on your garden without enploying the underground hotbed technique: never use fresh manure for immediate planting. Aged, well-rotted (two years or older) manure or commercial composted dry manure from a garden store can be worked into the soil. If the fresh manure is the only kind available, it should be worked into a compost with a variety of materials including soil, grass clippings or other green matter, and let rot before applying to the garden.

FOR WHAT THIS barnyard banter is worth, rabbit manure is the highest in nitrogen content of all manure, followed by hen, sheep, steer, horse, duck, cow and pig in that order.

Allen plans to plant May 1. This will give his hotbed a month to cool off and with the manure six inches below the soil surface, his transplants should be far enough along so that when the roots do meet up with the "hot stuff" they'll be ready for it.

Allen's optimistic wife is already calling their garden plot "Allen's Jungle."

calls.

Why has the cost of medical care increased so tremendously?

DR. WALKER: People demand higher and higher levels of medical care — expensive, sophisticated tests, earlier hospitalization. They must be willing to pay for it. Years ago people didn't go to the hospital until they were on death's doorstep.

The increase in malpractice suits has something to do with this too. Take a pneumonia patient. The doctor must order chest x-rays, a cardiogram, other lab tests, or he might be in big trouble. Laboratory tests protect the doctor, too.

Take a typical concussion — what is it? A bumped head. Years ago the doctor sent the kid home with instructions to the parent to watch him. A few years later, concussion patients also got skull x-rays, later overnight observation in the hospital. Then a brain wave test and more skull x-rays were added. Today's doctors may even add brain scans, EMI-scans, echo-encephalograms — maybe $1,000 worth of tests.

DR. HOLLETT: So many times, one's own clinical judgment is not considered enough anymore.

DR. WALKER: In the horse and buggy days, the doctor would set a broken bone, cast it, splint it and say, "Any trouble, call me." Now he must see an x-ray before manipulating the bone, again afterwards, again while it's healing, and still once more after the cast is off.

DR. HOLLETT: Hospital equipment is tremendously expensive. Someone must step in and set up criteria for these tests so the doctor can use his clinical judgment without being subject to suit, or the cost of medicine will be prohibitive.

One of these days people will realize that sometimes you must take a little chance. It's like demanding a crossing guard at every corner in town. No. You can reduce risks to a minimum, but no risk can be reduced to zero. The cost would be fantastic.

DR. WALKER: Doctors in the primary specialties believe this. They don't want to subject their patients to enormous costs either. They make more initial clinical judgments. The other specialists go on to more sophisticated tests when they are needed.

Suppose a family is moving into a new area. How can thay choose a family doctor, and how can they be sure he is a good one?

DR. HOLLETT: The average doctor is above average in intelligence or he would never get through medical school. But beyond that, how he gets along with people and how he relates to the patient are also important.

I would suggest you ask your new neighbors for their recommendations. Then I would check out these factors:

- Is he well qualified?
- Is he on the staff of a reputable hospital?
- Is he in good standing with the local medical society, or his specialty society, such as the American Academy of Family Practice?
- Is he board-certified? If he is, you know he is keeping up with the most recent medical advances.

Women's emotional needs treated at new facility

by Monica Wilch Perin

A newly opened $18 million structure at Northwestern Memorial Hospital in Chicago houses a unique new facility for women.

The building is the joint home of Prentice Women's Hospital and Maternity Center and Northwestern Institute of Psychiatry. These two medical entities are being brought together in a program called psychosomatic liaison.

Psychosomatic liaison is a new concept of teaching and patient care which seeks to meet the emotional needs of women undergoing childbirth, abortion, sterilization or treatment of female illnesses.

DIRECTED BY Dr. Peter Barglow, associate professor of psychiatry at NW Medical School, the psychosomatic liaison program is designed to make psychiatric treatment and counseling more readily available to women admitted to Prentice as well as to make the hospital staff and medical students more perceptive of the hospitalized women's emotional needs.

According to Dr. Barglow, "We have enough studies on the psychological effects of abortion, sterilization, adolescent pregnancy, infertility, loss of a baby, birth of a child, threat of mastectomy, hysterectomy or other surgery to predict many typical reactions.

"We think we can help women through some of the traumas they face by giving the hospital staff greater understanding. We will, of course, also be available to the women to help them deal with special problems and their own feelings."

UNDER THE NEW program expectant mothers admitted to Prentice who have a history of depression, mental hospitalization, alcoholism or drug addiction will be followed closely by a psychiatric team from the beginning.

"Problem conferences" centering on the backgrounds and progress of these patients will be held by Dr. Barglow for nurses, medical and nursing students, social workers and other staff members.

"One of our most important responsibilities will be helping to teach young physicians and nurses how to listen better so they will be in tune with the emotional needs of their patients," Dr. Barglow said.

Both the obstetrics-gynecology and psychiatric departments of the NU medical school plan to introduce educational programs emphasizing the interdependent roles of the two specialties.

PSYSICIANS AND psychiatrists also will jointly offer counseling fo rape victims, sex counseling, prebirth preparation for first-time parents and family planning counseling.

There are about seven women physicians on the obstetrics-gynecology staff and 25 in the psychiatry department — although not all of the latter will be involved in the psychosomatic liaison program.

The associate chief of staff at Prentice is Dr. Gloria Sarto.

In addition to the expanded role of psychiatric services, the new hospital facility is designed to create a more home-like environment for maternity patients. According to Dr. Barglow, the hospital is trying to normalize the approach to childbirth and is considering such possibilities as:

- More liberal visiting hours for family members, including children.
- Primary nursing care, in which a single nurse would have full responsibility for the care of a few specific patients from the time they enter the hospital through followup after discharge.
- Giving patients greater voice on matters of treatment, such as medication, anesthesia and delivery position.

It was 50 years ago March 20 that the couple was married in Chicago.

The Carlsons have lived in Mount Prospect for the past five years since George retired from truck gardening. He grew up on a farm on East River Road, Leyden Township, Chicago, and brought his bride there to live. They eventually reared three sons on the farm.

Ask Andy

Lungfish rarely need dip in lake

Andy send the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Gus Davis, 11, of High Point, N.C., for his question:
WHAT IS A LUNGFISH?

As a general rule, the finny fishes that swim through the water of the world get the oxygen they need from the water that surrounds them. True, there are exceptions to this rule. The walking catfish can stay out of water for days if the weather is damp and drizzly enough. But the lungfish is the champ in the fish-out-of-water record book. He can last as long as four years without even so much as a quick bath.

More than 300 million years ago, the lungfish was a common fellow throughout most of the world. Then, as now, he favored the swampy ponds or any other body of water that tended to disappear during the dry season. Unlike most fishes, he is quite at home in stagnant water — in fact, he wouldn't have it any other way.

Over the years most of the lungfish species disappeared, and only six species are known to exist today — one in Australia, one in South America and four in Africa. All lungfish possess at least one lung and can live by breathing fresh air.

Of the six species, the ones found in Africa and Australia are the most remarkable. They have two lungs, which are really adaptations of their swim bladder. Their bodies are eel-shaped, and their behavior is most definitely unfishlike. Indeed, they require steady intakes of fresh air. Unlike other fish, they cannot stay underwater indefinitely. If forced to do so, they will drown.

During dry seasons, when the water level sinks lower and lower, the average lungfish prepares for a period of estivation — the hot weather counterpart of hibernation. And each species copes with the dry spell in its own way. The South American species constructs a tunnel in the mud. His breathing and pulse rate slow down, and he lives on energy stored in his body.

The African species is a bit more fancy in his preparations. Before the mud dries up completely, he builds a cocoon from a ball of mud, carefully leaving a breathing hole at the top. His body secretes a substance that provides a protective, antidrying coating that covers every part of him except the mouth. He wraps his tail around his head and goes to sleep. Scientists have discovered that this amazing fish can survive for up to four years imprisoned like this.

During estivation the lungfish lives on food energy stored in his body. If the estivation period is long, he may lose up to half his body weight. A major problem during estivation is the removal of body wastes. The lungfish solves this problem by separating the wastes from the water and using the water over and over again.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Veronica Muniz, 9, of Gallup, N.M., for her question:
WHERE DOES A SKUNK GET THAT TERRIBLE SMELL?

The "terrible smell" caused by a skunk is the characteristic most frequently associated with this small, peaceable vegetarian. Actually, he rarely uses this rather drastic, unforgettable form of defense. When confronted by an enemy, however, he lets loose with a spray of a thick, yellowish fluid known as n-butyl mercaptan. Once exposed to this unwelcome shower, predators rarely return for a second dose.

Ordinarily, a placid, sweet-tempered little animal, the skunk produces his characteristic odor strictly as a last-ditch defensive tactic. Two glands near the base of the tail produce the fluid, which is sufficient for several squirtings. The spray, coming from one or both glands, carries 10 to 12 feet or even farther in a favorable wind. And the strength of its odor can be detected half a mile away. Although a misguided predator might be temporarily blinded by the acid fluid, the syptoms usually disappear within a few days.

Harry Fishbein's death at age 78 followed that of John Crawford by exactly one week.

Harry was one of the most popular of the bridge experts. Everyone like him. He was a five-time winner of the Vanderbilt Cup plus many other national championships. He invented the Fishbein convention to defend against silly preemptive bids and then gave it up after people gave up those silly preempts.

Fishy's defensive play in today's hand is now a well-known false card. When he made it in 1935 it was probably its first appearance on the bridge scene.

When South started after trumps he was prepared to guard against four to the jack in the West hand. When Fishy dropped the nine under dummy's king, South decided that East might hold four. He played the queen and Fishy had developed a trump trick.

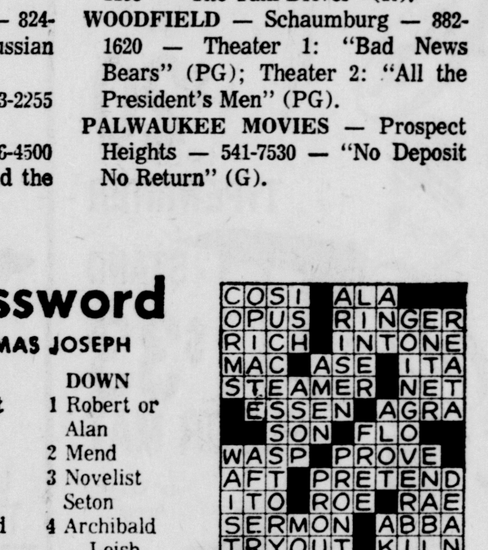
Yesterday's Answer



DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

sugar 'n spice

Coffee

the versatile ingredient

As a beverage, coffee is a favorite. But even greater pleasures are in store for those who haven't yet discovered how versatile it can be.

Coffee lends a subtle flavor, color and aroma to other foods. And if too much caffeine is a worry, decaffeinated coffee can be used in these recipes, instead of regular.

Coffee Crunch Kuchen

½ cup evaporated milk
⅛ teaspoon baking soda
2 eggs, beaten
½ cup chopped pecans
2¼ cups all-purpose flour
2 cups firmly packed brown sugar
3 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
Dash of salt
½ cup vegetable shortening
½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup 40% bran flakes
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon

Mix flour with brown sugar, baking powder, and salt. Cut in shortening and butter with pastry blender or 2 knives. Stir in cereal. Measure 1 cup of the mixture, add cinnamon, and set aside.

Combine coffee, milk, and soda; blend into remaining flour mixture. Stir in eggs. Pour into greased and floured 13 by 9-inch pan. Sprinkle with measured cereal mixture; then sprinkle with pecans. Bake at 375 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes. Serve warm. Makes 15 or 16 servings.

Note: Baked kuchen may be cooled, wrapped in aluminum foil, and frozen; thaw and reheat in moderate oven.

Coffee Chiffon

3 tablespoons sugar
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup hot brewed coffee
1 cup milk
3 egg yolks, beaten
½ teaspoon vanilla
3 egg whites
3 tablespoons sugar

Mix 3 tablespoons sugar, the gelatin, and salt in a saucepan. Add hot coffee and stir until gelatin and sugar are completely dissolved. Add milk. Blend in egg yolks. Cook and stir over medium heat until mixture coats a metal spoon, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat, add vanilla, and chill until thickened. Beat egg whites until foamy throughout. Gradually beat in 3 tablespoons sugar; continue beating until mixture forms stiff shiny peaks. Fold into thickened gelatin mixture. Pour into serving dish or souffle dish. Chill at least 2 hours. Serve with prepared whipped topping or a custard sauce, if desired. Makes about 5 cups or 6 to 8 servings.

Note: Mixture may be poured into a 4 or 5-cup mold or individual molds. Chill 3 hours; unmold.

Barbecue Sauce

½ cup catsup
¼ cup sugar
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons vinegar
1 tablespoon grated onion
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper

Combine all ingredients in a saucepan. Bring to a boil; reduce heat and simmer 10 minutes. Use for barbecuing spareribs, chicken, and other meats, or as topping on meat loaf. Store covered in refrigerator. Makes 1⅓ cups.

Coffee Frosted

2 cups brewed coffee, chilled
1 pint vanilla, coffee, or chocolate ice cream
Coffee Ice Cubes

Combine coffee and ice cream in a bowl and beat with hand beater until blended and thick. (Or use a shaker or glass jar and shake until blended; or blend in electric blender.) Serve immediately over Coffee Ice Cubes in tall glasses. Makes 3⅔ cups or 3 or 4 servings.

Coffee Ice Cubes
Pour about 3 cups cooled brewed coffee into freezer tray. Freeze until firm, at least 5 hours.

Coffee Anglaise

3 cups cold water
2 tablespoons mint jelly
½ cup coffee, regular grind
10 whole cloves
Orange peel from 1 medium orange

Pour water into a 6 or 8-cup percolator; add jelly. Place coffee, cloves, and orange peel in basket. Place basket in percolator and percolate gently 7 minutes. Remove from heat; remove basket. Serve hot or cold; sweeten to taste. Garnish with prepared whipped topping, and sprinkle with nutmeg, if desired. Makes about 3 cups or 8 demitasse servings.

Mary Lou O'Connor's recipes

They reflect flavors of many locations

by LOIS SEILER

In the family's many moves around the country, from California to Washington, Montana and Michigan, Mary Lou O'Connor, Mount Prospect has picked up excellent recipes wherever they have lived. She likes short cuts to fancy foods and concentrates on tasty accompaniments which add zest and color to a menu.

"Flavorful salad dressings, tasty breads and unique vegetables can do wonders for a simple entre," she said.

"A super salad dressing" is the way Mary Lou describes the house specialty from a restaurant in Laguna Beach, Calif. Made with mayonnaise and buttermilk, it is seasoned with pepper, garlic and bleu cheese. Mary Lou likens it to Hidden Valley Ranch Dressing, although the Laguna dressing is much thicker.

SHE TOSSES A green salad made with equal parts of crisp romaine and head lettuce with the dressing. It also may be served as a dip for fresh vegetable appetizers like rutabaga, zucchini, cauliflower, celery and carrots.

A restaurant called The Pantry in Portland, Ore., served a jazzed-up garlic bread with their delicious homemade soups and freely passed out the bread recipe to its customers. It quickly became popular with the O'Connor children, so Mary Lou makes it often for family and guests.

The spread consists of margarine, cheddar and Romano cheeses seasoned with Worcestershire, garlic and paprika. Whipped until fluffy, it can be stored in the refrigerator for weeks and used as needed. Mary Lou spreads it on sour dough, French or Italian bread and toasts it under the broiler. It is excellent with ribs and steak.

PARTY PIZZAS, which Mary Lou acquired from a friend in Flint, Mich., makes a huge quantity of appealing appetizers. Velveeta cheese binds browned pork sausage and ground beef together and the herb-flavored mixture is spread on rye rounds. Mary Lou stores these in plastic bags in her freezer, then heats them as needed. They make a hearty, snappy appetizer which her two children love to eat as snacks. Mary Lou believes that the sharp hostess is one who prepares weeks or even months in advance, and with appetizers such as these there is no last-minute fuss.

He husband, Dick, often barbecues the entree during the summer months, and Mary Lou's side dishes dress up the meal. Spinach stuffed tomatoes, an onion pie and wild rice make excellent accompaniments for any number of grilled meats, or for elegant fillets with Bernaise sauce.

An imaginative cook, Mary Lou likes color on her dinner plate, and the tomatoes stuffed with a well-seasoned spinach mixture pleases the eye and the palate.

THE CUSTARD-TEXTURED onion pie could be likened to a quiche, but is not as rich. Both onions and cheese add flavor. For dessert, Mary Lou suggests fruit and several cheeses and a sweet dessert wine.

Bridge and cooking vie for Mary Lou's favor as enjoyable activities. a member of Prospect Heights Women's Club and Arlington Associates, she plays marathon bridge in both groups.

LAGUNA BEACH SALAD DRESSING

- 2 cups mayonnaise
- 1 scant tablespoon lemon juice
- ½ cup buttermilk
- 1 teaspoon monosodium glutamate
- ½ teaspoon freshly-ground pepper
- ½ teaspoon garlic powder
- 2 to 3 tablespoons crumbled bleu cheese

Place all ingredients into a quart jar and shake well. If thinner dressing is desired, add more buttermilk. Will keep in refrigerator for several weeks. Use as salad dressing or as dip for fresh vegetables.

JAZZED-UP GARLIC BREAD

- 1 pound margarine
- ½ pound sharp cheddar cheese, grated
- ¼ pound Romano cheese, grated
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- ¼ teaspoon garlic powder
- ½ teaspoon paprika

Let margarine and cheese stand at room temperature 3 to 4 hours until soft. Whip slowly with electric beater until fluffy. Add remaining ingredients. Store in covered container in refrigerator. Will keep for several weeks. Spread on sour dough, French or Italian bread and toast under broiler.

PARTY PIZZA

- 1 pound good quality bulk pork sausage
- 1 pound ground beef
- 1 pound Velveeta cheese, cut up
- 1 teaspoon sweet basil
- 1 teaspoon oregano
- ¼ teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 to 2 tablespoons dried parsley
- 1 loaf small party rye bread

Break up sausage and ground beef and brown well together. Drain off all grease. Add cheese and let melt in hot meat. Stir in herbs and mix well.

Mound mixture on party rye; freeze on cookie sheets and then store in plastic bags in freezer. Before serving, heat in 350 degree oven about ten minutes.

SPINACH STUFFED TOMATOES

- 1 package frozen chopped spinach
- 1 cup dry dressing mix crumbs
- 1 medium onion, chopped fine
- 1 beaten egg
- ¼ cup butter, melted
- ¼ cup Parmesan cheese
- ½ teaspoon garlic salt
- ½ teaspoon thyme
- ½ teaspoon monosodium glutamate
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- 6 medium tomatoes

Cook spinach and drain well. Add all ingredients except tomatoes and mix well.

Cut off tops and scoop out insides of tomatoes. Fill with spinach mixture. Bake, uncovered, at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. To keep moist put ¼ cup water in pan while cooking. Serves 6.

ONION PIE

- 1 to 1½ cups crumbled saltines
- 2 medium onions sliced in thin rings
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 to 3 eggs
- 1 to 1¼ cups milk
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ¼ cup sharp cheese, shredded.

Spray an 8-inch pie tin with a vegetable coating and arrange crumbled saltines in the bottom and up the sides.

Saute onions in butter until transparent and place over cracker crumbs

Beat egg, milk and seasonings together with a fork. Pour over onions and sprinkle cheese on top. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Cut in wedges. Serves 6.

SWEET BASIL, oregano and garlic season the ground meat and cheese mixture Mary Lou O'Connor heaps onto small slices of rye bread. She got the recipe from a friend in Michigan.

Baking errors can be corrected

Bread baking

by Catherine Clark

If you didn't get back to your rising bread in time from your errands, the over-risen dough can be saved by adding certain ingredients according to your best judgment.

If you catch the dough at the point when it has risen to three times its original size instead of two, it will have consumed much of the sugar that you originally put in, as well as having spent some of its yeasting power. Therefore, mix half the amount of yeast with half the total amount of sugar and add to the dough, using the following method:

Take the dough back to the counter, dump it out on the floured surface and pat it into a flat piece. Soften the yeast in a minimum amount of liquid — for instance, one ounce of yeast, depending on the size of your recipe, in bout two tablespoons of milk, cream or water. Add the sugar and stir until it becomes a creamy paste.

DISTRIBUTE OVER the surface of the dough piece: roll up the dough and start kneading again as you did in the beginning..

It will be a little sticky and will ooze out until you start working it in well, but in a few minutes you will have incorporated the yeast into the dough. You must be sure to knead sufficiently well to distribute it thoroughly throughout the dough, no longer than five minutes. Then let the dough rise again before shaping into loaves.

If you suddenly realize that some or all the sugar or salt was omitted before you set the dough to rise, these ingredients can be kneaded in dry the same way as the yeast paste. Be sure to knead the dough enough to get good disbursement.

The dough will probably rise quicker this time and you should catch it at the point when it has slightly less than doubled in size before baking.

IF THE over-fermentation has carried on for so long that the dough has risen way up and then collapsed, your only hope is to replace the full amount of yeast and sugar, plus up to one additional cup of flour, since both yeast and sugar have been completely consumed at this point and the over-fermentation has begun to liquefy the protein in the flour.

Bran Gingerbread

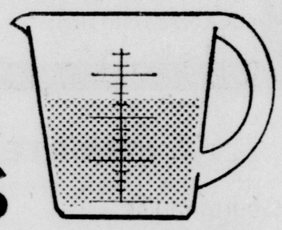
Dietary fiber in this gingerbread

Gingerbread dessert is a perfect picnic treat and the cereal ingredients offer another plus.

Cereal is a convenient and good tasting source of food fiber in the diet — important because some nutritionists believe there may be a shortage of fiber in the American diet today.

Measurements are given in both metric and American Standard measurements. Though dry ingredients normally are stated in grams in the metric system, American food and equipment industries have manufactured cups and spoons in metric milliliters for both liquid and dry ingredients to help make metric conversion easier.

Cooking with metrics



BRAN GINGERBREAD

430 milliliters (about 220 grams) or 1¾ cups all-purpose flour
5 milliliters or 1 teaspoon baking soda
3¾ milliliters or ¾ teaspoon double-acting baking powder
2½ milliliters or ½ teaspoon salt
5 milliliters or 1 teaspoon ginger
5 milliliters or 1 teaspoon cinnamon
1¼ milliliters or ¼ teaspoon ground cloves
125 milliliters or ½ cup shortening
1 egg
250 milliliters or 1 cup molasses
250 milliliters or 1 cup hot water
500 milliliters or 2 cups 40 per cent bran flakes

Mix flour with soda, baking powder, salt, and spices. Cream shortening; beat in egg. Add molasses and hot water and blend until smooth. Add flour mixture; heat until smooth. Stir in cereal. Pour into a 23 centimeter (9 inch) square pan which has been lined on the bottom with paper. Bake at 160 degrees Celsius (325 degrees Fahrenheit) for about 45 minutes, or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool in pan 5 minutes. Remove from pan and finish cooling on rack. Serve warm with prepared whipped topping, if desired. Makes 9 servings.

Universal Product Code

Consumers win a major victory

Consumer groups consider they have won a major victory over the grocery industry in their fight against the computerized checkout system that already is being used at about 50 of the United States' 40,000 supermarkets.

The victory lies in a recent announcement by an industry group. The Public Policy Subcommittee of the grocery industry's Ad Hoc Committee on the Universal Product Code recommended that stores using the new system continue to mark prices on each item. Grocery chains had planned to discontinue individual pricing while continuing to mark prices on shelves where items are stored.

The subcommittee's recommendation puts retention of individual pricemarking on a voluntary basis. In one suburban Maryland store, Giant Foods already has discontinued computerized checkout because of consumer antipathy and the industry group's recommendations.

CONSUMER GROUPS say leaving prices off each item reduces a buyer's price awareness. Tests by the industry indicate shoppers have had some trouble getting used to the new system.

Many shoppers do not have the price of an item as firmly fixed in their minds if it is not plainly marked on a can or package.

The computerized checkout issue has raised considerable controversy. Although most consumers have not yet come into contact with it, many products already carry Universal Product Codes on labels in readiness for widespread use of the system.

UPC's are a series of printed bars of varying widths. Instead of ringing up the price of a product on a cash register, the supermarket checker simply passes the item over a window on the checkout counter. Beneath the window a television-type device called a scanner sends the code to a computer.

THE COMPUTER is programmed with current prices of all items in the store. Individual pricing is unnecessary. The name of the item and its price flashes on a screen at the checkout counter. The customer also receives a printed receipt that lists the name of each item, along with its price.

Supermarket spokesmen say the new system will lead to savings that can be shared with shoppers. Among the biggest savings are labor costs incurred in individual pricemarking. Fewer checkers will be needed because the new system is faster than the old.

No doubt scanners save time. Mrs. Pat Smith, a checker at a Washington, D.C., area supermarket that installed the new equipment in October, says she now can handle in less than five minutes the weekly shopping of a large family that runs as high as $80. It used to take her 15 minutes.

This alone would be good news for shoppers who dislike waiting in long checkout lines. Mrs. Smith said customers so far are divided about whether they like the new system better.

OPPONENTS OF THE new system also include labor union members, who fear widespread use would eliminate jobs of clerks and checkers.

For consumer groups, the big questions are whether customers would wind up paying more than they planned for items, and how much of a store's savings actually would be shared with shoppers.

One supermarket chain estimates the scanning system could save in one month a figure equal to about two per cent of total sales in a typical store.

If all savings were passed on to customers, it would add up to an extra week's groceries for each over the course of a year.

(United Press International)

Profits and product code take beating in survey

Doubt about the U.S. profit system and uncertainty regarding the Universal Product Code were evident in the latest nationwide consumer survey conducted for the Super Market Institute in Chicago.

The consumer survey, called Super Market Trends (SMT) is the fourth in a series of periodic studies designed to help supermarkets identify and evaluate the attitudes and changing shopping habits of American food shoppers.

The latest study was conducted in November, 1975. Earlier studies were completed in the summer of 1975 and in November and July of 1974.

THE NOVEMBER, 1975, update shows that 16 months after the initial SMT baseline reading, there is considerable erosion in people's belief in the American profit system.

In July, 1974, 82 per cent of the SMT respondents agreed they were better off when a company is making a profit: only 13 per cent disagreed; 5 per cent were not sure.

In November, 1975, only 69 per cent of consumers agreed they are better off with a profit-making company; 11 per cent disagreed; and a large 20 per cent were not sure.

Study researchers attributed the latest response to continuing consumer anxiety about personal economic well-being and ongoing anti-business sentiment.

THE LATEST SMT survey included a new series of questions on the Universal Product Code (UPC) and computer-assisted supermarket checkout systems.

Computer-assisted supermarket checkout systems are now operating in 51 supermarkets in the United States and Canada. A computer-assisted checkout system uses an electronic scanning device linked to an in-store computer to provide automatically the prices of food items and ring them up on an electronic cash register. The scanning device is able to read a bar code produce identification symbol called the Universal Product Code, now printed on most grocery packages.

Consumer benefits of the new systems include a detailed checkout receipt and faster checkout. Disadvantages center mainly on the lack of individually priced shelf items.

THE SURVEY findings show that slightly more than half of the study respondents could identify the UPC symbol. However, most persons interviewed said they don't know what the UPC is all about.

About one-half of those "aware" of the UPC say they are not sure about any major advantages of the system for consumers and nearly the same number were not aware of advantages accrued to the supermarkets.

Other survey results show that consumer anxiety about economic well-being has continued to dominate the mood of the country since SMT's first reading in the summer of 1974. Results over the past 16 months also indicate that a negative view of business persists in the public mind.

If you have over-risen dough in the bread baking pan, you can overlook it and bake a loaf of balloon bread. Otherwise, drop the bread out of the pan onto the counter, remold it into another loaf and allow it to rise until nearly doubled, which is a little sooner than usual.

If bread does not rise in the bowl, check by taste for omissions of yeast or sugar, or the possibility that you doubled the salt inadvertently. If you've doubled the salt, throw out the dough — it's not worth saving.

If, however, recollection tells you that the yeast or sugar has been omitted, the mistake can be corrected by using previously described methods.

If dough does not rise the first time in the bowl, it's no use making it up into loaves hoping something miraculous will happen in the bread pan. But when disaster strikes in breadbaking, usually all is not lost.

No-cooking night aids 'battle-fatigued' moms

The working woman cooks

by Joyce Zeller

I was asked the other day if it bothered me to write a column that seemed to encourage women to lose interest in cooking and taking care of their homes.

No. Not at all. I'm not advocating that we desert our traditional family responsibilities. Most of us couldn't live with that notion and, besides, there are times when all of us really enjoy cooking a meal or cleaning a room until it becomes pleasant again after being a mess.

The point I'm making in this column is that it's perfectly okay to get sick to death of having to do these things every day with no choice in the matter. It's even better for us to admit these feelings out loud and find out that we're not alone.

I FIGURE THAT in 20 some years of marriage and motherhood I have, conservatively speaking, prepared more than 15,000 meals, and I don't feel the least bit guilty about saying I'm tired and I'd like to find an easier way of doing things.

None of us should feel guilty about that. The strange thing about cooking and feeding is that it has become symbolic. Women are judged on their worth as a human being by how dedicated they are to this task.

When my husband and I were in Toronto last fall, we saw a feminist comedy review at a local night club. It was called "Sweet Reason" and it dealt with the subject of the liberation movement. It was funny and serious at the same time and one of the sketches made the point about cooking better that I can.

THE SCENE BEGINS with a woman alone on stage. She is obviously dressed for traveling. She's seated at a desk, suitcase by her side. She's on the phone, talking to her husband. She's concerned. She's giving him last minute instructions for handling any emergency . . . how to call the plumber, the pediatrician, the veterinarian. As a last thought she says something like:

"And don't worry about dinners. I've cooked them all for you. They're in the refrigerator in plastic bags labeled Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday."

An assistant enters and says," Madam Prime Minister, your car is waiting."

The audience laughed at the ridiculousness of the situation, but was it all that far out? Wouldn't we all do something like that so we could leave the house without feeling guilty?

IF WE'RE going to lick this problem at the same time we're going to have to learn to be comfortable with our true feelings about the things we have to do. Nobody is supermom.

Everytime I see that commercial on TV about the women who runs around the house singing to her furniture to wake it up so she can wax it, I expect the men in the white coats to come through the door and take her away somewhere so she can get well.

I've talked to women who have tried professional counseling to help resolve the conflicts within themselves. Most of them have had success, but I gather, and I'm only exaggerating a little, that there are some therapists out there who believe a woman is sick if she leaps to her feet during a session and says she hates motherhood, housework and cooking and she wishes her whole family would move somewhere else.

NOW, YOU AND I wouldn't have any trouble diagnosing that problem. That woman has a galloping case of battle fatigue. What she needs is a little role reversal. The rest of her family should agree to cook at least four meals a week while she comes home from work, has a martini, putters around the garage a bit and thinks about glueing the dining room chairs back together, or whatever.

With that in mind, may I sugggest the night off? And for those of you who haven't heard a word I said, I offer a meal you can prepare the night before so that all you have to do when you get home is light the oven and pour the milk.

The recipe uses the new style chunk ham that comes in a can the size of a tuna fish can. You can use any canned ham, however.

THE MENU: Ham Meltaways, Super Salad, Angel Delight Cake, milk, tea, etc.

First the Ham Meltaway sandwiches. This makes six sandwiches: 1 7 ounce can chunk ham
8 ounces shredded mild cheese like brick or Muenster or Tilsiter
1 tablespoon grated onion
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
½ cup mayonnaise
6 hamburger buns
Aluminum foil

Mix first four ingredients. Moisten with mayonnaise. Spread mixture onto buns. Wrap each sandwich in foil and refrigerate. To serve heat in 250 degree oven one hour.

The salad: use fairly equal amounts of lettuce, cabbage (red and green) and spinach. Toss with one can of three-bean salad and juice. Add such things as mushrooms, black olives, etc.

(My goodness, I don't have to tell you how to make a salad!) Get the greens ready the night before and add the beans and things at the last minute.

For the cake: use a pre-baked packaged angel food or chiffon cake. Mix one large container of non-dairy refrigerated whipped topping with one package of any kind instant pudding or one six-pack of English Toffee bars, crushed. Spread between layers and on top of cake. Refrigerate overnight.

Bottled up

About 74 per cent of the soft drinks and beer produced in the United States to be sold in continaers currently is packaged in cans or nonreturnable bottles. The remainder is bottled in refillable glass containers, according to Department of Commerce studies.

Two states, Oregon and Vermont, have adopted legislation requiring manufacturers to change to a totally returnable system, and a bill before Congress would do the same thing nationally.

The Beverage Can Makers and Can Manufacturers Institute oppose the change, and say it would lead to higher prices and would save no energy if consumers returned reusable bottles at a rate of 70 per cent or less.

Outdoor cooks

Ninety per cent of Americans who cook outdoors are less than 45 years old, says the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

Hamburgers are the most popular food for outdoor cooking, served by 96 per cent of those who barbecue. Ninety-three per cent also cook steak, and 85 per cent, hot dogs.

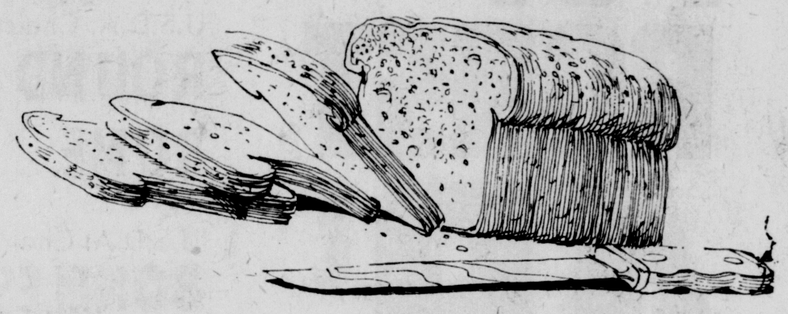
Are whole wheat lovers gypped?

by MONICA WILCH PERIN

If you are one of the "back-to-nature" set who buys only brown bread, take note of a petition filed recently with the Food and Drug Administration and the Federal Trade Commission.

The complainant is the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a Ralph Nader organization, which is urging that artificial coloring in bread be banned on grounds it makes the product seem better than it really is. There is an FDA statute prohibiting that sort of thing.

The presumption at issue is that brown color equals whole wheat flour and other natural, healthful ingredients. The Center interviewed 65 people in a supermarket who were buying a particular brand of brown bread. Sixty-one per cent of them said they thought the brown color of the bread indicated it contained wheat. In fact, the Center said, the bread contained white flour and caramel coloring.



THE CENTER also is urging that bread manufacturers be required to list the percentage of different types of flour in their bread, and that they not be allowed to advertise the product as "wheat" bread if it contains white flour.

Roman Meal bread was singled out by the Center for its TV commercial in which a rustic type of individual shows off bins of whole wheat, rye, flaxseed and other grains and natural ingredients, reciting the slogan "The light brown bread with natural whole wheat goodness.

According to the Center, Roman Meal bread contains predominantly white flour.

A comparative reading of bread labels at a local grocery confirmed that all wheat breads are not what they are cracked up to be.

OF NINE WHEAT breads examined, five contained predominantly white flour plus caramel coloring; three of these listed whole wheat flour further down. Two contained predominantly white flour with some whole wheat flour and no coloring. Two contained all whole wheat flours, one with caramel coloring and one without.

Interestingly, the bread with the whole wheat flour and caramel coloring was Brownberry's Health Nut bread, which says on its label, "Nothing Artificial Added."

The other brands surveyed included several Jewel Maid wheat breads, Butternut, Buttermaid, Hollywood, Home Pride and Holsum.

Label reading is made especially tricky in the case of these wheat breads because some list "wheat flour." The problem is that all flour is made from wheat unless otherwise specified, but the kind of flour that makes authentic wheat bread is "whole wheat flour," containing the wheat germ. Such breads may also contain wheat germ and cracked wheat as additional ingredients. All other flours — enriched, unbleached, and "wheat" — must be considered white flour.

Kitchen staples take on unique, perky flavors

A well-seasoned macaroni salad takes on a new flavor by varying the fresh vegetables you put in it.

In place of celery and green pepper, add equal amounts of cucumber and radish or tomatoes and cooked green beans to your macaroni. Cooked peas and pimiento also offer another easy taste change.

Some people like a mayonnaise dressing. Others use sour cream or bottled French dressing. Here's a recipe to switch about to make it seem a different dish everytime.

When taking a macaroni vegetable salad on a picnic, chill it well first and keep it cold until time to eat. Pack it in a covered container and store in a cooler or carry the salad in a chilled wide-mouth vacuum jug. Between snacking or meals at picnic time always keep a salad with mayonnaise, egg or dairy products thoroughly chilled for safe eating.

MACARONI VEGETABLE SALAD

2 cups elbow macaroni (8 ounces)
1 tablespoon salt
3 quarts boiling water
½ cup diced celery
½ cup diced green pepper
½ cup shredded carrot
¼ cup finely chopped onion
2/3 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon each: pepper, dry mustard

Gradually add macroni and 1 tablespoon salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander. Rinse with cold water; drain again.

Combine macaroni with remaining ingredients; toss lightly and chill. For a picnic turn into chilled wide-mouth vacuum jug. At home, serve on crisp lettuce leaves, garnished with additional shredded carrot, as desired. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

QUICK NOODLE BAKE

8 ounces wide egg noodles (about 4 cups)
1 tablespoon salt
3 quarts boiling water
1 cup drained chopped sweet mixed pickles
3 cans (8 ounces each) tomato sauce
½ teaspoon celery salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Shredded sharp Cheddar cheese

Gradually add noodles and salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander.

Combine noodles with pickles, tomato sauce and seasonings in lightly greased 1½ quart casserole; top generously with cheese. Bake, covered, in 375-degree oven 20 to 25 minutes or until sauce is bubbling. Serve with grilled hamburgers or frankfurters, as desired. Makes 4 servings.

Higher the income, more spent on meat

The higher a household's income, the more it spends on meat, says the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

A study of Caliofrnia consumers made for the trade organization indicates most income groups spend one-third of their total food budget for meat, but about 40 per cent of their food dollar goes to meat when their annual income is above $20,000.

The study also indicated that trips to the grocery increased slightly as income grew. Most consumers said they made one or two shopping trips a week, but 30 per cent of those earning more than $20,000 a year made three to five weekly trips for food.

BUDGET FOOD STORE

Sunflower cousin thrives in U.S.

The artichoke, formerly grown solely in Italy and other countries bordering on the Mediterranean, has become a product of a thriving industry in California, where the entire U.S. supply is grown.

THE ARTICHOKE is about 2,500 years old and was first discovered in North Africa. April 19 to May 19 is National Artichoke Month in honor of the 37 tons grown yearly in the U.S.

Native Californians are very familiar with this edible cousin to the sunflower, and they serve it in a variety of interesting ways. Its deleicate yet distinctive flavor lends itself to innumerable combinations with other foods like meat, seafood, poultry and, of course, butter.

For newcomers to artichoke cooking, the basic preparation is extremely simple. Trim the stalk so the artichoke stands upright and cut off about one inch from to top. If you feel the tips of the leaves, you'll find each carries a tiny thorn. Since artichokes are finger food, it's a good idea to trim the tips. Scissors are fine for this job.

THEN STAND the artichokes in a deep pot; it's best if they fit snugly. Add a quarter teaspoon salt for each artichoke and add two or three inches boiling water. Cover and boil until the base is easily pierced with a fork. This might take anywhere from 35 to 45 minutes.

Drain them upside down, and they're ready to be served hot or cold with a sauce, marinated in a tangy dressing or stuffed with a meat or seafood filling.

ARTICHOKES WITH HOLLANDAISE SAUCE

3 egg yolks
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon water
¾ cup butter, melted
Dash cayenne pepper
Salt to taste
Artichokes, cooked

Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored in top of double boiler. Add 1 tablespoon lemon juice and water; beat together. Stir in 1 tablespoon melted butter; place over hot, not boiling, water. Constantly stir egg yolk mixture until slightly thickened; do not allow to curdle. Remove immediately from heat and beat in 1 tablespoon butter. Gradually add remaining melted butter, 1 tablespoon at a time, stirring constantly. When thickened, season with remaining lemon juice, pepper and salt. Serve with artichokes. Makes 1 cup sauce.

Variations of Hotlandaise sauce;

Orange — omit x tablespoon lemon juice at end of preparation, add 1/3 cup orange juice and ½ teaspoon grated orange peel

Oregano — add 1 teaspoon oregano leaves

Dill — add 1 teaspoon dill weed

ARTICHOKES SAUSAGE SAUCE AND EGGS

1 pound sausage meat
¼ cup flour
1 teaspoon paprika
2 cups milk
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
2/3 cup sliced pimiento-stuffed olives
2 to 4 cloves garlic, crushed (to taste)
1 cup dry sherry
3 hard-cooked eggs, halved
Parsley

While artichokes are cooking, cook sausage over low heat until well browned; drain off drippings. Combine flour and paprika; mix with sausage. Slowly stir milk and cheese into sausage mixture. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add olives, garlic and sherry; bring to boil. Place 2 tablespoons sauce and an egg half in each artichoke and place in shallow baking dish. Pour remaining sauce in artichokes. Bake in 350-degree oven 15 minutes. Garnish artichokes with parsley. Serves 6.

Chicken combines with artichokes

Artichokes became a popular item in European cuisine after centuries of cultivation which led them out of their original thistle stage.

Although more commonly eaten on the Continent, each year more American cooks discover the joys and versatility of the artichoke. Americans also have an advantage since the globe artichoke, for example, is in season most of the year while in Europe the season only runs from June to September.

A whole steamed artichoke is a treat and also a good item to have on one's diet menu. Serve it with a simple dressing of imported olive oil, wine vinegar and herbs.

The heart of the artichoke is a special delicacy and is eaten cold, marinated or used in special dishes such as a minted chicken, sauteed with mint, other herbs and tomatoes. Serve with rosemary potatoes and a mixed green salad. A chilled white wine, either very dry or semi-dry and fruity, adds to the overall experience.

ARTICHOKE MINTED CHICKEN

1 chicken, quartered, about 3 pounds
Salt and pepper
1/3 cup imported olive oil
1 clove garlic, chopped
1 onion, chopped
1 package (9-ounce) frozen artichoke hearts
2 tomatoes, cored and chopped
1 jar (4-ounce) pimiento, drained and diced
1 tablespoon chopped fresh mint leaves or 1 teaspoon dried mint leaves
¼ teaspoon oregano
1 can (13¾-ounce) chicken broth
1/3 cup dry white wine (or apple juice)
2 tablespoons flour

Sprinkle chicken with salt and pepper. Heat oil in a large skillet and brown chicken pieces on all sides. Remove chicken pieces and set aside. Saute garlic and onion in drippings for 2 or 3 minutes or until lightly browned. Drain excess fatty drippings. Add chicken pieces, artichoke hearts, tomatoes, pimiento, mint, oregano and chicken broth. Cover and simmer gently for r5 to 50 minutes or until chicken is tender.

Remove chicken pieces to a platter. In a bowl, mix wine and flour. Stir mixture into pan juices. Stir over low heat until sauce bubbles and thickens. Simmer for 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Spoon sauce over the chicken. Serve garnished with parsley. Makes 4 services.

ROSEMARY POTATOES

¼ cup pure imported olive oil
1 clove garlic, chopped
1 teaspoon crumbled rosemary
Salt

Cover potatoes with water and simmer until potatoes are tender. Cool and then peel. In a skillet, heat oil and saute garlic until golden. Stir in rosemary.

Add potatoes and stir over medium heat until potatoes are golden brown on all sides. Season to taste with salt. Makes 4 servings.
